ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

First and foremost, Families and Work Institute (FWI) and the Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM) would like to acknowledge the exemplary organizations profiled in this Guide. They are the leading lights in creating workplaces that address the needs of the 21st century workforce and the challenges of a changing economy. These employers are changing the norms of the workplace by thinking anew about how, when and where work gets done and about how to structure work to better meet the needs of employees, their families and communities, while also achieving and improving organizational success. We hope that other employers will be inspired by the ideas—and the business impacts—they read about here.

Thanks to Christine Koh, Jennifer Koh and Kaitlyn Dowling for their masterful prose. They have honed the art of capturing in a few sentences the most innovative ideas and impressive results of these award-winning employers. Thanks too to Morra Aarons-Mele whose assistance has been invaluable in the creation of this Guide.

Thanks to all the staff of FWI—in particular to John Boose for his impressive layout and design; Kelly Sakai for helping create the Sloan Award questionnaires and analyzing the data to select the winners; Leni Kirschenbaum for managing the When Work Works project; and Ken Matos for managing the production of this Guide.

Thanks to Kathleen Christensen and the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation for providing leadership and support for When Work Works since its inception in 2003. Kathleen and the Sloan Foundation are truly strategic visionaries. They have used research to uncover the misfit between the way work has traditionally been organized and the workforce and economy of today. And they have not stopped there. They have forged the way in translating research into action to address this misfit and bring about change in the way work gets done.

Thanks to the Twiga Foundation and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce's Institute for a Competitive Workforce, whose partnership since the beginning of When Work Works have been critical to the success and growth of the project today. Our work would not have been possible without their insightful leadership.

Thanks to our local partners—chambers of commerce, local and state SHRM chapters, and other organizations in cities and states around the country—that have worked with us to reach out to their communities, sharing research and promising practices, and bringing recognition to their best employers who are making work “work.”

We could not have uncovered these bold ideas without their help.

WELCOME TO THE GUIDE

This Guide profiles promising and innovative practices from 352 employers that are creating effective and flexible workplaces to make work “work” better for both the bottom line and for employees.

All of these employers are recipients of the Alfred P. Sloan Award for Excellence in Workplace Effectiveness and Flexibility. They have been selected through a rigorous application process that incorporates an employer and employee survey. The winners are a diverse group, representing employers of different sizes and industries. Some operate from a single office with a staff of 10, while others are global enterprises with employees numbering in the tens of thousands. They also come from all over the country, representing 40 states and the District of Columbia.

The Sloan Awards are part of When Work Works, a nationwide initiative to bring research on workplace effectiveness and flexibility into community and business practice. When Work Works partners with communities and states around the country to:

- Share rigorous research and employer best practices on workplace effectiveness and flexibility;
- Recognize exemplary employers through the Sloan Awards based on surveys of employers and employees; and
- Inspire positive change so that increasing numbers of employers understand how effective and flexible workplaces can benefit both business and employees, and use this information to make work “work.”

The 2013 Guide to Bold New Ideas for Making Work Work is a product of the When Work Works project. It is published and distributed jointly by Families and Work Institute and the Society for Human Resource Management.

ABOUT WHEN WORK WORKS

Families and Work Institute (FWI) is a nonprofit, nonpartisan research organization that studies the changing workforce, family and community. As a preeminent think tank, FWI is known for being ahead of the curve, identifying emerging issues, and then conducting rigorous research that often challenges common wisdom and provides insight and knowledge. As an action tank, FWI conducts numerous studies that put its research into action and then evaluates the results. Its purpose is to create research to live by. For more information, visit www.familiesandwork.org and follow us on Twitter @FWINews.

The Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM) is the world's largest association devoted to human resource management. Representing more than 250,000 members in over 140 countries, the Society serves the needs of HR professionals and advances the interests of the HR profession. Founded in 1948, SHRM has more than 575 affiliated chapters within the United States and subsidiary offices in China and India. Visit SHRM Online at www.shrm.org.

When Work Works is a national initiative, led by the partnership of Families and Work Institute and the Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM), to help organizations of all sizes and types become more successful by transforming the way they view and adopt effective and flexible workplaces. When Work Works is one of the foremost providers of resources, rigorous research and best practices on workplace effectiveness and flexibility in the nation. The initiative administers the prestigious Alfred P. Sloan Awards for Excellence in Workplace Effectiveness and Flexibility annually, which recognize exemplary employers for using flexibility as an effective workplace strategy to increase business and employee success. Ellen Galinsky and Hank Jackson

The winners of the 2012 Alfred P. Sloan Awards for Excellence in Workplace Effectiveness and Flexibility confirm that leading employers are continuing the movement toward creating 21st century workplaces. Whether they are world-recognized large employers or small and mid-sized ones, known primarily in their own communities, they are replacing a command and control system of authority and a “time-at-work” gauge for assessing productivity with a focus on actual business results, on learning opportunities, on flexibility, and on fun and support.

Among the newest and most newsworthy trends we see this year are the following eight:

Trend One: Offering a Dazzling Array of Workflex Options. The Alfred P. Sloan Award for Excellence in Workplace Effectiveness and Flexibility assesses seven different categories of what we call workflex—flexibility that works for both the employer and the employee. These seven categories are:

- Choices in Managing Time includes control over an employee’s own schedule and agreeing that the schedule or shift meets his or her needs.
- Flex Time and Flex Place includes traditional flexibility, daily flexibility (short-notice schedule changes), compressed workweeks and working at home.
- Reduced Time includes full-timers who could arrange to work part time in their current position and part-timers who could arrange to work full time in their current position as well as part-year work.
- Time Off includes a lack of difficulty in taking time for personal or family matters; paid days off for personal illness; paid days off to care for sick children; time off for elder care without fear of losing one’s job; paid vacation time; paid holidays; time off for volunteering without the loss of pay; and caregiving leaves for birth, adoption and seriously ill family members.
- Flex Careers enable employees to dial up or dial down their careers by taking extended time off for caregiving or sabbaticals. They also enable employees to phase into retirement.
- Dealing with Overwork includes efforts to create reasonable work demands, to reduce unnecessary work and to create boundaries between life on and off the job.
- Culture of Flexibility includes not having to choose between advancement and devoting attention to family life, not having advancement jeopardized by asking for flexibility, and overall supervisor support when work-life issues arise.

When the Sloan Awards were launched in 2005, it would have been surprising to see employers excel in all seven categories; today, it is more commonplace. Bon Secours Health System—a seven-year winner of the Sloan Awards with two winning sites in 2012—offers a good example of the rich array of workflex possibilities that winners provide:

- The mission of Bon Secours Health System, a health care system with 21,000 employees in the U.S. and two winning sites in 2012, is to bring compassion to health care and to provide “good help” (the meaning of the term Bon Secours) to those in need. Their leaders find that flexibility helps employees take care of themselves so that they can deliver the best care possible. At Bon Secours, employees are now able to reduce their hours over the summer, and return to regular hours in the fall without any changes to their job status or benefits. Older employees can retire and then be rehired without jeopardizing retirement checks. They can also “retire” at age 65, but continue to work part time while collecting a pension check or work past 70 ½-years-old and begin receiving a pension check in April of the following year. In addition, Bon Secours provides part-time hours, job sharing, choice of shifts, flexible start and end times, and telecommuting. To reduce overwork, the patient mobility team also literally takes much of the heavy lifting out of nursing jobs, allowing employees to continue their jobs while shifting physically difficult tasks to others. ConnectCare, the company’s new electronic medical records system, also takes the guess work out of handwriting interpretation and is accessible through any mobile device with remote access. Conference calls, laptops, air cards, remote access and Smartphones also help employees maximize time spent working flexibly.

Another trend we see in the provision of flexibility is its adoption in industries where people say, “It can’t be done,” or “it would never work.” These include manufacturing organizations, call centers and the armed services. In fact, this year there are seven winners from Navy-affiliated organizations alone.

In addition, there are signature offerings, two of which we highlight below:

- Management Recruiters of Chattanooga-Brainerd in Tennessee, with 13 employees, has a signature “working families” program where employees can come in after they drop their children off at school, leave in time to pick them up or be there when they get home.
- At Cardinal of Minnesota in Rochester, Minnesota, with 70 employees, the “platinum rule” helps guide business decisions: treat others the way they want to be treated, even when it may cost the organization to do so. A Hardship Program permits employees to contribute their unused sick leave to a bank that can be used by employees having to take an unplanned emergency absence.

Another emerging trend is to move away from tracking time at all:

- Kentucky Employers Mutual Insurance in Lexington, Kentucky, with 197 employees, does not have a sick leave policy, thus enabling employees to take care of themselves and their loved ones without the constraint of set days and workplace penalties. The company finds that regardless of the unlimited nature of this initiative, employees average less than three days per year of absence due to personal illness, family illness and tardiness combined. The company leaders view this as a demonstration of respect and appreciation.

- FMYI, Inc., a social collaboration site with 10 employees in Portland, Oregon, has recently adopted a “No Limit Time Off” policy, giving their employees unlimited time off without banked limits. As long as deliverables are being fulfilled and there is agreement with teammates and management, employees can take time off as they need to.

Although employers are more likely to cover the spectrum of workflex options, there is less attention to creating a culture of flexibility than to providing flexible programs and policies. Likewise, there is less attention to dealing with overwork—which we think is an important area for employers to address in the coming years.

Trend Two: Focusing on Results. To some employers, focusing on results rather than time as a measure of productivity is seen as a way to reduce overwork. Ninety-eight percent of the 2012 winning employers describe employees’ accomplishments as very or extremely important. In contrast, 11% of 2012 Sloan Award winners describe the number of hours that employees spend at work as very or extremely important. Among the results-focused leaders is Ryan, LLC, a multi-service tax firm based in Dallas, TX with 793 U.S. employees and 17 winning sites this year.

- The history of flexibility at Ryan goes back to 2008. CEO Brint Ryan realized that things needed to change because of a loss of what he calls the “shining stars.” He realized the firm was creating a “sweat-shop reputation” and they needed to do “something truly radical.” The result is called myRyan. It enables employees to work wherever they want and whenever they want, as long as their work responsibilities are met. At Ryan, there is no defined organization-wide schedule, no minimum hours and no requirement that work be done in the office. Instead of tracking hours spent at work, employees are held responsible for their performance and results. By tracking client service scores, revenues, leadership, core competencies and other firm-wide initiatives through an online dashboard called myRyan Measures, employees can easily track their performance. Executive Vice President and Chief of Staff Delta Emerson says, “We focus completely on our people getting done what they’re supposed to be getting done. myRyan is built on results.” This focus on results, quantified by a “score,” means that Ryan employees are responsible for creating and managing their performance and their schedules. Maintaining a high score has replaced the need to work a certain number of billable hours, which is the traditional metric by which professional service firms are measured.

Another company with a results focus is the Building Construction Products Division of Caterpillar Inc., with 95 employees, based in Cary, North Carolina.

- The leadership of the Building Construction Products Division of Caterpillar Inc. realizes that flexibility is not only a necessity for employees to manage their personal and professional issues, it also helps the company attract new talent, ensuring that the company remains competitive in their field. Caterpillar Inc. focuses on results versus hours worked so employees understand that as long as they get their work done, supervisors are able to support flexible work schedules without question.

Measuring organizational results as a result of workflex remains an inexact science. Most employers rely on self-reported or correlational data—the organization has provided workflex and business has grown or retention has increased, though the precise impact of workflex on these changes is uncertain. In this Guide, many winners cite results are better recruitment; development and retention of employees; increased employee engagement; lowered stress levels; and business growth.

Likewise, measuring individual and team results has even further to go, with employers testing dashboards, as they are doing at Ryan, as well as both carrots (rewards for achievement) and sticks (penalties for a lack of achievement). How to quantify organizational, individual and team results remains a challenge for the future.

Trend Three: Providing Learning Opportunities. For the most part, learning opportunities are seen as providing training and educational course work. In addition, however, there is a fresh focus on providing employees with time and space for self-directed and shared learning opportunities through buddies, mentors and coaches:

- The Arizona Small Business Association, with 10 employees in Phoenix, Arizona, provides a good example of this emerging approach. Its work is dedicated to helping small businesses succeed, but it, too, is a small business that works to practice what it preaches. ASBA focuses on results, not time spent in the office. Flexibility is made possible through cross-training employees. If one employee needs to be out of the office for the day, another employee can step in to take care of any responsibilities. The ASBA also trains and guides its young employees with a mentoring program and one-on-one coaching. In addition, the organization provides employees with a “green room” for brainstorming and relaxation.
- BDO USA, LLP, an accounting and consulting firm with 32 of its worksites as winners of 2012 Sloan Awards, assigns new employees a “buddy” in a similar job position to help them transition into their jobs. Career advisors are also assigned to younger employees.
- At CWS, a Website design, application programming and marketing solutions company with 17 employees in Rochester, Minnesota, ongoing education and mentoring help employees learn and grow in their jobs. If an employee reads a book relative to the company’s industry, he or she can receive compensation for writing up a “Book Report.”
- CivicPlus in Manhattan, Kansas, with 95 employees, brings innovative communication solutions to communities and holds monthly Lunch and Learn meetings, funded by the company. These provide a place where employees can share innovative ideas with their coworkers. From these meetings, teams can be formed to work on Innovation Projects. Once a month, an Innovation Project is chosen and team members receive one week away from their normal responsibilities to bring the project to life.

- MHBT Inc., an insurance provider in Dallas, Texas with 170 employees, has a Young Producer Development program for new employees as well as a Perpetuation Development Program for client service personnel.
- Access Sciences Corporation, an information management and technology consulting firm in Houston, Texas with 80 employees, has built learning into its career hierarchy and created a consulting career framework that gives employees landing spots at specific places within the organizational structure. For entry-level employees, the firm provides specific training for the first one or two years of their tenure until they declare a specialty. As employees progress, these landing spots give them the security they need to sometimes take a slower approach to work in order to take time for family and personal needs. The framework also provides positions in the organization for industry experts, which requires mature workers with great knowledge.

Trend Four: Connecting Employees through Technology. In virtually every winner, the technology options for being connected are omnipresent. These are seen as enabling flexibility as well as providing learning opportunities. The list of technology options is huge, from cloud computing to GoToMeeting, to Smartphones and remote access, to desktops and data files. Ernst & Young, an audit, consulting, financial advisory and tax service firm with 75,000 U.S. employees and four winning sites in 2012, provides a good example of the use of technology.

- Ernst & Young provides both formal flexible work arrangements and informal flexibility. For employees who worry that using flexibility could hurt their careers, more than 200 employees have been promoted to executive levels while on formal flexible work arrangements. Flexibility is greatly aided by technology. Laptops for all employees, monthly allowances to cover connectivity costs, 24/7 access to technical assistance, videoconferencing, call forwarding, shared team calendars and instant messaging help employees stay connected no matter where they're working from.
- The Dow Chemical Company in Houston, Texas with 715 employees uses technology—a Website called Flexibility@Dow—to provide tools and resources for employees wishing to learn more about their flexibility options. Technology also allows employees to access work documents, e-mail and phone calls remotely through laptops with VPN access, BlackBerry devices and cell phones.

Technology can solve problems, but it can also increase them. This is aptly illustrated by a quote in Leslie Perlow's 2012 book, Sleeping with Your Smartphone, where a professional says of his Smartphone, "I love the thing and I hate it at the same time. The reason that I love it is that it gives me so much power. And the reason that I hate it is that it has so much power over me."

Perhaps as an antidote to the always-connected world of today, there is increasing emphasis on having fun and on maintaining well-being.

Trend Five: Being Committed to Fun and Happiness. The word “happy” appears in employers’ write ups of their vision for the workplace 25 times this year, much more frequently than in the past. There are many creative ideas for providing fun in the Guide, including:

- At the Employer Solutions Group in Provo, Utah, with 43 employees, there are fun activities like birthday parties, making snow angels and the occasional marshmallow fight.
- Geonetric in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, with 70 employees, offers software solutions to health care companies and believes that supporting its employees directly affects the quality of the solutions it provides. Its leaders work to make their worksite fun. Snacks and beverages including cereal, seasonal fruit, and trail mix are available at all times; and during breaks employees can enjoy fresh popcorn from the company’s popcorn maker. The company also provides inventive company events such as scheduled ice cream truck arrivals, quarterly chair massages and onsite Halloween trick-or-treating as well as other recreational options such as a basketball hoop outside the office or lunches where employees order pizza and watch an episode of “The Office” together.

Trend Six: Promoting Wellness and Well-Being. In addition to providing fun activities at work, there is a greater emphasis on wellness and well-being than in the past. This increase is documented in Families and Work Institute’s 2012 National Study of Employers. In 2012, 63% of employers provided wellness programs for employees and their families, up from 47% in 2005.

Typically, wellness programs focus on exercise and diet.

- Express Employment Professionals, a staffing agency in Rochester, Minnesota with 15 employees, pays the $75 membership fee to the Rochester Athletic Club for every employee. The average employee goes to RAC to work out during lunch 11 times each month. Employees say that being able to work out during the day relieves stress, helps them re-focus and increases their productivity.
- Climax Portable Machining & Welding Systems in Newberg, Oregon, with 156 employees, has a wellness program that has helped employees by removing unhealthy snack and beverage options from the facility and providing healthier options at company functions. In addition, they provide exercise classes like Zumba. As a result, a number of employees have stopped smoking and lost weight.
- WellStar, a health care company in Marietta, Georgia with 11,000 employees, provides personal health coaches to work with employees on their own health. Employees meet with health coaches to set goals and then continue to meet on a regular basis via private online message boards and on the phone for continued support.

A new direction in wellness programs is a focus on the whole employee’s well-being. Employers do so by helping employees set aside time for personal development (or betterment as one firm calls it) and by helping employees set personal and not just professional goals.

- Serving 43 Indian reservations in Oregon, Washington and Idaho as well as numerous other Indian organizations throughout the nation, leaders at Northwest Portland Area Indian Health Board, with 53 employees, realize that their employees are not working typical nine to five jobs. Laptop computers with docking stations, cell phones and phones for teleconferencing help provide accessibility to company information for employees whether they are at home or in the field. Employees are able to bring their infants and pets to work and every employee is given 30 minutes of paid time daily to engage in a wellness activity of their choosing. Paid time is also available for American Indian cultural events such as canoe journeys, pow-wows, sun dances and tribal fairs. The Wellness Committee aims to bring out the best in employees through professional acknowledgements, birthday and anniversary celebrations, healthy eating and exercise programs.
- Service Express, Inc., a data center maintenance company with 194 employees in the U.S., relies more on employee engagement than the time clock to measure productivity and credits its flexibility practices for empowering employees. Vision Talks with managers help employees define personal, professional and career goals and create a place for them to access these goals on the Intranet so they can easily review, track and update these goals at any time.

It is clear that a focus on well-being is an emerging trend, one that we hope will continue to grow in the coming years.

Trend Seven: Emphasizing Service. Along with wellness and well-being, leading employers are emphasizing service—helping those in need—whether they are in their own organizations, in their communities or in the country as a whole.

As this country remains in the throes of a volatile economy, a number of employers help employees manage their own financial needs, as Amerisure Mutual Insurance Company in Farmington Hills, Michigan, with 360 employees, does.

- Amerisure Mutual Insurance Company provides emergency financial assistance in a variety of forms to its employees, including gas cards, security deposits and Christmas gifts—no request is ignored.

In addition, as 2 million more service men and women are expected to enter the civilian workforce by 2016, numerous employees provide special help to veterans. One example is Deloitte, an audit, consulting, financial advisory and tax services firm with 44,000 U.S. employees and 13 winning sites in 2012.

- Overseeing Deloitte's efforts on behalf of veterans and their families is its Armed Forces and Ability First Business Resource Groups and its Veteran Practitioner Program. The firm provides a liberal leave and benefits policy that allows Deloitte practitioners who volunteer or are called for service to honor their military commitments. New hires are paired with experienced practitioners and a Deloitte buddy is assigned to each applicant to the Junior Military Officer Recruiting Program, introducing them to a forum of former JMOs working at the firm and offering chosen candidates positions within two days. Their customized and flexible model for career development—Mass Career Customization—serves all employees, including veterans, by using a lattice approach that gives employees options for how, when and where they work through decisions about pace, workload, schedule/location and roles in the workplace.

Another emphasis in serving diverse groups of employees is helping those with disabilities:

- KPMG, a firm providing audit, tax, and advisory services with 23,000 U.S. employees and 30 winning worksites in 2012, has an Abilities in Motion Network that focuses on fostering an inclusive work environment for people with disabilities, their caregivers and people living with or caring for someone with a chronic illness. The goal of this network is to promote awareness within the organization of the unique needs and talents of individuals with disabilities and ensure all employees feel accepted, valued and are treated fairly.

Employers have found that helping their own employees and helping others go hand in hand.

- Supporting the personal and professional needs of personnel is a high priority to Naval Support Activity Hampton Roads, with 410 employees. Former veterans looking for Government work are heavily recruited and when applying for Government employment within USAJOBS, veterans with disabilities are given higher priority for employment than veterans without disabilities. A Transition Assistance Program (TAP) helps returning veterans transition from military to civilian employment and Return and Reunion Seminars are available to all personnel returning from tours of duty away from their families. These seminars help personnel cope with a number of symptoms related to being away from their normal support system/family members. An Ombudsman assists the needs of military families and low-wage military members have access to many free/low-cost opportunities including Commissaries and Exchanges that have goods at lower prices with no tax included. The organization's Morale, Welfare and Recreation committee comes up with fun and innovative ways to relieve stress and participation in charitable causes and local schools is heavily supported. In 2011, the organization received two Together In Education (TIE) awards for its support of local schools.
- Leaders at Image One, a managed print services company in Oak Park, Michigan, know their team members are at the core of the company's success and that employees' individuality makes a difference in the company. The company has established annual goals to increase job satisfaction, including greater flexibility, profit sharing plans, training and education, team activities, and a company goal of raising $1,000,000 for autism by contributing a portion of revenue to the cause.

Trend Eight: Surfacing Good Ideas from Employees. Employers know that good ideas for improving products, services and the work environment come from employees and some have created concerted efforts to mine these ideas.

- Aribex, Inc., an x-ray and radiography technology manufacturer with 55 employees in Orem, Utah, has created a system to look for ideas from employees and implements one new idea each month. The selected employee receives a gift card as thanks.
- Microsoft Corporation, the information technology company with 56,654 U.S. employees and two winning sites in 2012, has developed an internal tool called Kudos. This tool enables employees to acknowledge other employees' efforts with a project or work assignment. Both the employees and their managers get copied, as well as the sender's manager.

Conclusion

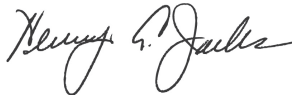

This is the eighth year Families and Work Institute (FWI), now in partnership with the Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM), the world's largest professional association dedicated to the HR profession, has given the Alfred P. Sloan Award for Excellence in Workplace Effectiveness and Flexibility. Each year, the Sloan Awards identify and recognize organizations that are executing exceptional policies and practices to create flexible and effective workplaces. This Guide has become the indispensable handbook to the best workplace practices that help employees meet their work and life needs and organizations achieve extraordinary business results—an imperative in today's uncertain economic environment!

As we conclude the second year of our partnership and look to 2013, we are extremely excited about the increased awareness, interest and adoption of effective and flexible workplaces. Our 2012 National Study of Employers indicates that flexibility has increased in significant ways since 2005. It also indicates that much work remains to be done in educating organizations about the value workflex can bring to both the employee and the employer.

Together, FWI and SHRM look forward to continuing to meet this challenge with educational programming, cutting edge research and thought-provoking resources and materials.

HOW EMPLOYERS WERE SELECTED

All of the employers included in this Guide are winners of the 2012 Alfred P. Sloan Award for Excellence in Workplace Effectiveness and Flexibility.

The Sloan Award program is national in scope, and recognizes model employers of all types and sizes across the U.S. for their innovative and effective workplace practices. It is a site-based award, and for employers with more than one location, it is each local worksite that applies for and wins the award.

Using a rigorous scoring methodology that emphasizes the real life experiences of employees on the job, the Sloan Awards honor organizations that are using workplace flexibility as a strategy to make work work better—for both the employer and the employee. The application process takes place in two rounds. In Round I, employers apply by completing an online questionnaire about the flexibility programs and practices at their worksite. Responses provided by the employer are then measured against a nationally representative sample of employers, based on Families and Work Institute's ongoing National Study of Employers. Employers that rank among the top 20% of employers in the U.S., when compared with this national data, are selected as finalists and move on to Round II.

In Round II, employers are invited to have their employees complete a questionnaire that asks about their individual use of and experiences with flexibility and other aspects of an effective workplace, the supportiveness of their workplace culture and whether they perceive any negative consequences for using flexibility at their workplace. For organizations with fewer than 250 employees at the worksite, all employees are surveyed. For larger worksites, a random sample of 250 employees is surveyed. Of those surveyed, a minimum 40% response rate is required. The scoring used to select Sloan Award winners heavily weights the experience of employees. While one third of the final score depends on the employer's responses, two thirds of the score is determined by the employees' responses. There is no minimum or maximum number of award recipients.

KEY TO READING EMPLOYER PROFILES AND SCORES

A brief profile of each winning employer highlights their bold new ideas for making work “work,” focusing on flexible programs and other initiatives that help make these organizations more effective and successful, both for the employee and the employer. Taken as a whole, these profiles underline the many positive business impacts that employers attribute to their flexible and effective workplace practices and culture, and they point to positive impacts on the surrounding community as well, from reducing traffic congestion and going green to supporting volunteerism.

After the name of the organization,  indicates a two-time Sloan Award winner,  a three-time winner, * a four-time winner,  a five-time winner,  a six-time winner,  a seven-time winner, and  an eight-time winner.

The Sloan Awards are site-based. If an employer wins for multiple locations, there will only be one written profile, however, each winning worksite will be listed separately beneath this with its corresponding scores.

Scores and Symbols

 Employer Score: This is an overall average score based on responses to the employer application that asks employers about the flexibility programs, policies and practices they have in place and employee access to these provisions of flexibility. This score is on a scale of 1 to 100, with a higher score indicating a more positive overall rating.

 Employee Score: This reflects how employees responded to questions about their access to and experiences with flexibility and other aspects of an effective workplace, the supportiveness of their workplace culture and whether they perceive any negative consequences for using flexibility at their workplace. This score is on a scale of 1 to 100, with a higher score indicating a more positive overall average.

 Overall Score: This is a combined score derived from responses to both the employer application and the employee questionnaire, on a scale of 1 to 100, with higher scores reflecting more positive responses to questions on both surveys. One third of the overall score comes from the employer survey, and two thirds of the score from the employee surveys with heavier weighting on some categories over others.

Employer Category Scores: The Sloan Award employer questionnaire asks about more than 30 different aspects of workplace effectiveness and flexibility. We group these questions into the following categories that align with the way that business leaders think about these options:

- Culture of Flexibility reflects whether supervisors are knowledgeable about flexible practices and promote and communicate them effectively.
- Flex Careers refers to flexibility over the course of an employee's career or working life, including provisions that enable employees to enter, exit and re-enter the workforce and to increase and decrease their workload or pace.

- Choices in Managing Time reflects the degree to which employees can exercise some choice about when they work—from scheduling hours and overtime to deciding when they take breaks—and about how their time at work is spent. This category also looks at differences that may exist between hourly and salaried employees.
- Caregiving Leave looks at whether the organization offers its employees leaves for birth, adoption and caregiving of ill family members and whether any of this leave is paid.
- Time Off includes policies and practices that apply when employees take time away from work, including scheduled absences (such as vacations and time for training) as well as formal policies for taking sick days and planned sabbaticals. It also includes informal access to time off for unanticipated or unplanned events.
- Reduced Time includes options such as access to part-time or part-year schedules.
- Flex Time and Place includes various forms of flexibility that affect when and/or where employees do their job, such as flex time, telecommuting and compressed workweeks.
- Health Care and Economic Security for Full- and Part-Time Employees examines benefits such as health insurance, retirement and other financial supports for full- and part-time employees.
- The Impact of the Recession looks at ways employers may have used flexibility to reduce costs and increase productivity, as well as other ways employers have supported their employees through the recent economic downturn.
- Support for Educational and Economic Opportunities includes educational opportunities offered to employees, supports for using those educational opportunities, and assistance for eligible employees in gaining access to various public benefits.

While the Employer Category Scores are not reported, they are used to determine the top employers for each of these categories.

1-800 CONTACTS, Inc. *59 | 72 | 68*Direct-to-Consumer Retail Contact Business*Winning Site: Draper, UT, 830 Employees*www.1800contacts.com

1-800 CONTACTS has found a way to provide lots of flexibility within its organization, even to call center employees who, typically, aren't able to work from home or have much control over their schedules. The company has provided many call center employees with at-home workstations and offers over 200 shifts to call center employees who work onsite. Veterans receive extra flexibility and are allowed to work part time as they transition back into civilian life. The families of military members are given extra flexibility on a case-by-case basis and offered up to six weeks of personal leave upon request. Employees have access to subsidized meals, low cost medical plans and emergency financial assistance; these programs are especially helpful to low-wage employees. Video conferencing, laptops and Smartphones help employees work remotely. Summer family picnics, movie events and an associate fitness center have improved morale. Hundreds of employees enrolled in a personal finance training session offered last year. Leadership is convinced that these measures have had a positive impact on productivity and health insurance renewal rates. 1-800 CONTACTS rarely has to advertise open job positions—80% of applicants come from employee referrals.

AAA Fair Credit Foundation *63 | 74 | 72*Nonprofit Credit Counseling*Winning Site: Salt Lake City, UT, 19 Employees*www.faircredit.org

Leaders at AAA Fair Credit Foundation feel they are setting an example in its community about the importance of working in an overall healthy and happy work environment. Those who are able can telecommute from home and a company contingency plan is in place to keep the office operational in the event offices are physically inaccessible. Technology helps employees work flexibly, but the foundation does not expect employees to use it to stay connected to work 24/7. Military members' and their families' flexibility needs are responded to as needs arise. In addition, a number of initiatives exist to keep employees happy and healthy. The PEAK program gives each employee one paid hour each week to dedicate to his or her own personal betterment. All employees receive a paid holiday on their birthday and employees can recognize a job well done by giving their team members a Dollar Day voucher; eight vouchers can be turned in for a day off with the approval of a supervisor. An open door policy breeds a culture of trust and dedication among employees and leadership. Social events like an annual summer barbecue and potluck lunches support camaraderie among the staff. The foundation benefits from low turnover and has built a positive reputation among its clients within the community.

AASHE 57 | 73 | 69

Association of Colleges and Universities
Winning Site: Denver, CO, 25 Employees
www.aashe.org

The Association for the Advancement of Sustainability in Higher Education in Denver, Colorado understands that employees with lower levels of stress are able to perform at their jobs better and that flexibility keeps stress levels low. Most employees are able to work from home or another location; many take time to care for and visit family and bring their work with them. One staff member even works from his boat! AASHE staff members are encouraged to take vacation time and not to check their e-mail, allowing themselves to fully “turn off” from work. AASHE leadership believes this is important for employee well-being. Staff members appreciate the ability to work flexibly, and leadership believes this motivates employees to do even better work.

Access Sciences Corporation 66 | 73 | 72

Technology Company
Winning Site: Houston, TX, 80 Employees
www.accesssciences.com

This information management and technology consulting firm has created a consulting career framework which provides landing spots at specific places within the organizational structure, mainly to provide flexibility. This framework gives employees the security they need to sometimes take a slower approach to work to take time for family and personal needs. The framework also provides positions in the organization for industry experts, which requires mature workers with great knowledge. In addition, the framework provides positions for young employees. The firm provides specific training for the first one or two years of employees’ tenure until they declare a specialty. Various career tracks and traditional flexibility options are made possible through technology like remote access and the firm’s intranet. New mothers are also able to ease back into work after returning from maternity leave by working part-time hours. Wellness programs, service opportunities and zero-cost benefits all keep employees well and happy. The firm has enjoyed a decrease in absenteeism and benefits costs as well as low turnover.

Adams County Workforce & Business Center *70 | 76 | 75

Government Workforce Agency
Winning Site: Brighton, CO, 48 Employees
www.co.adams.co.us

Despite the difficulties of a slowed economy, Adams County Workforce & Business Center has met or exceeded all performance measurements for the past four years. Workplace flexibility programs such as telecommuting are made possible by access to mobile technology and remote access. Schedules and leaves for military family members and skill development and tuition reimbursement for low-skill workers have all contributed to high morale. Each year, this publicly funded workforce development system administers an employee survey to measure morale and workplace satisfaction. This past year, the WBC scored high marks on job satisfaction, concern for peers and health and wellness. The WBC's organizational Cultural Competencies in areas of staff morale, well-being, teamwork, recognition and reward, continuous improvement, strengths and performance are established as benchmarks to ensure that commitments to flexible work and a positive work environment are upheld.

Aerzen USA Corporation

65 | 72 | 72

Manufacturing – Durable Goods

Winning Site: Coatesville, PA, 55 Employees

www.aerzenusa.com

As a Triple Bottom Line company, Aerzen USA Corporation is committed to employee development, employee contributions and sustainability practices. The company has engaged in a Lean Transformation initiative with the Delaware Valley Industrial Resource Council to train all employees on lean practices and interpersonal skills necessary for employees to take advantage of leadership opportunities. These opportunities are presented as employees are split into groups to address key business issues—each group is led by an employee who is NOT part of the management team. Courses and team meetings are scheduled during work hours and employees feel that they are able to directly contribute to improvements in their environment. All employees are able to take advantage of compressed workweeks including jobs that require continuous onsite presence. As part of its sustainability practices, Aerzen USA Corporation allows employees to bring recyclables to the office if their communities do not have recycling services. Onsite composting and a rechargeable battery program are also in place. The recycling program is handled by an employed member of the Camphill Community, a community dedicated to building programs valuing the contributions of individuals with disabilities. The partnership offers a two-way reward for both the company and the employee.

Alexander & Company, PSC **

83 | 62 | 71

Certified Public Accounting and Consulting Firm

Winning Site: Owensboro, KY, 25 Employees

www.acocpa.net

Alexander & Company, PSC has experienced 88 years of success and believes it owes this success to workplace flexibility. The company believes that a flexible workplace lowers levels of stress and provides less conflict in managing work and family life. The company provides portable technology, allowing employees to access company files from any location. Employees are also able to alter their work schedules on a daily basis to take care of personal and family needs. Older workers are offered more flexible working hours and work-from-home arrangements while interns are frequently hired from local colleges and high schools. The company believes that these initiatives have led to decreased absenteeism, turnover and medical costs while resulting in higher productivity.

Professional AssociationWinning Site: Durham, NC, 650 Employees*www.aicpa.org

The American Institute of Certified Public Accountants may be a financial institution, but their greatest investment ends up being in their employees. This year, they began a program called “Grow the Ranks” that helps younger employees reach for management positions. Its dynamic intranet site, accessible to all employees from any location, gives employees the opportunity to work from home in addition to telecommuting options available through Flexible Work Arrangements. These arrangements include staggered start and end times, compressed workweeks, part-time employment with and without benefits, and telecommuting. Currently, laptops and flexible work arrangements are being issued for volume-centric jobs such as the e-mail and call center so that they can also enjoy these benefits. Understanding that more and more of their employees were busy in and outside of work, the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants launched a Health and Wellness program including Weight Watchers at work, free fitness memberships to easily-accessible locations throughout the area, CPR classes, monthly wellness seminars available online, subsidized Pilates classes and a Wellness Portal where employees can track their progress. In addition, parents who are interested in adoption have access to Adoption Expense reimbursement, offering expense reimbursements for qualified adoption-related expenses for foreign, domestic and foster care adoptions. All these initiatives have resulted in high retention rates and better customer service allowing the company to make further investments in employee-centric programs versus hiring and training costs.

Editing ServicesWinning Site: Durham, NC, 91 Employees*www.journalexperts.com

Leaders at American Journal Experts understand that the world is forever changing as they assist scientists toward publication in top science journals through editing and translation services. Its internal environment mirrors this philosophy by providing tools and creating resources that help its employees adapt to their ever-changing circumstances as well. As all company operations are web-based, employees and contractors are able to work remotely. This is especially helpful for new parents or parents who would like to keep working full time as they attend to the needs of their families. Children are also welcome in the office when the necessity arises. Company developers are in constant motion updating online processes, collaborating with departments to automate tasks and creating customized developmental tools to optimize performance. Working hours are at the discretion of employees as American Journal Experts understands that some employees work more optimally at different times of the day than others. Biweekly team meetings, quarterly company meetings, peer-nominated recognition programs and subsidized outings ensure that, in the midst of this liquid environment, face-to-face community and teamwork are still fostered. The rapid growth of the company despite the economy shows that adapting to their employees' needs benefits everyone.

Amerisure Mutual Insurance Company *****

63 68 68

Insurance Company

Winning Site: Farmington Hills, MI, 360 Employees

www.amerisure.com

Amerisure Mutual Insurance Company managers work with employees to design schedules that fit the needs of employees and the needs of the business. Recent college graduates and professionals looking for a career change are offered three specific development programs that offer fast-track growth to accelerate employees' career advancement as insurance professionals. The company has provided emergency financial assistance in a variety of forms, including gas cards, security deposits and Christmas gifts—no request is turned away. Employees can work from home when needed by logging into the computer system remotely and having calls, voicemails and e-mails forwarded to their phones. Amerisure's Champions Through Excellence program recognizes employees who have gone above and beyond. Finalists and winners of the award are given a monetary reward and can attend the Champions Through Excellence Conference. In its most recent employee survey, Amerisure exceeded the benchmark scores in all eight categories.

Anvil Media Inc.

66 71 71

Digital Marketing

Winning Site: Portland, OR, 17 Employees

www.anvilmediainc.com

As a search engine marketing agency, leaders at Anvil Media know the power of technology. To provide flexibility for its employees, Anvil Media invested in laptops, remote access and e-mail from the web. Employees are able to work from home or on the road and fit family with their career. One director from the company was able to work from Memphis for an extended period to be with her family during the time of her father's death. Another employee became a new father and was able to reduce his hours so he could be at home more with his family. The reward for this flexibility, they have found, is greater employee engagement and greater productivity.

Arapahoe/Douglas Works! *****

72 66 70

Workforce Development Center

Winning Site: Centennial, CO, 90 Employees

www.adworks.org

Employee engagement and spirit levels are high at Arapahoe/DouglasWorks! This Colorado workforce center has a 50+ mature worker program, which notifies registrants of job openings within the county. Assistive technology is available for disabled employees and full services for disabled job seekers, including case management, workshops and direct assistance in locating job leads. Veteran job seekers are given priority access to new job listings. An Employee Assistance Program is also available to veteran employees. Families of military members are also given access to the flexibility they need to care for their families while a loved one is deployed. Remote access, Smartphones, laptops and videoconferencing are available to better help employees manage their time. Employees can also work with their supervisors to find flexible work options, like telecommuting, that allow them to meet their work and family responsibilities.

Architecture Technology Corporation

67 | 68 | 70

Technology Architecture

Winning Site: Minneapolis, MN, 34 Employees

www.atcorp.com

Leaders of this software technology company find that employees are more productive and happy when they have flexibility in their workday. So the company provides a rare environment where employees set their own hours. No need to clock in or out. No need to get clearance from a supervisor. The only time employees are “required” to come into work is when a division is having a division meeting. This people first culture is accentuated by the company’s program, rewarding random acts of kindness.

Aribex, Inc.

72 | 69 | 72

X-Ray Products Manufacturing

Winning Site: Orem, UT, 55 Employees

www.aribex.com

This x-ray and radiography technology manufacturer in Orem, Utah has found a way to give its employees flexibility—even those employees who are directly involved in production. Mature workers and those with disabilities are given work that matches their physical capabilities and comfort level. A corporate university teaches leadership principles to management. All employees work a 9/80 compressed workweek—employees work 9 hours each day and receive every other Friday off. Two employees are also able to work from home thanks to technology and some key employees are able to use Smartphones to check in while away from the office. Despite the fact that most employees are not able to work remotely, Aribex strives to give them as much flexibility as possible. Some employees are even able to work split shifts to make time to attend school. The company also asks for suggestions from employees and implements one new idea each month. The selected employee receives a gift card as thanks. Any time an employee comes up with an idea that can save the business a significant amount of money they are acknowledged in the monthly meeting. The business has low voluntary turnover due in part to flexibility options.

Arizona Bar Foundation82 | 81 | 83*Nonprofit Professional Association*Winning Site: Phoenix, AZ, 18 Employees*www.azbar.org

In tough economic times, the Arizona Bar Foundation leadership found that employees can value flexible work options just as much as pay raises or bonuses. Young employees are mentored so that they learn not only their job, but how to be a professional. Smartphones, remote access and laptops allow employees to work remotely and make their own schedules. Kids and pets are even welcome in the office—a big relief for parents when their regular child care falls through. Employees are even encouraged to start their own creative workplace initiatives. When several employees decided they wanted to lose weight, they turned the training room into a workout room for once-per-week group exercise. Despite weathering tough economic circumstances and lay-offs and pay freezes, the Foundation has won the Sloan Award and Best Places to Work three years in a row. Flexibility and other fun initiatives have kept morale high and productivity up.

Arizona Health Care Cost Containment System 72 | 72 | 72*Health Care Program Provider*Winning Site: Phoenix, AZ, 953 Employees*www.azahcccs.gov

Arizona Health Care Cost Containment System has committed to flexible work as a way to help their employees during tough economic times. Despite hiring and budget freezes, AHCCCS has used flexibility to create the most positive employment experience possible. The organization also maintains “mature worker friendly” certification and advertises employment opportunities with professional associations of retired individuals. AHCCCS also advertises employment opportunities with professional associations for disabled individuals, veterans groups and veteran job fairs. The organization offers paid and unpaid internships and ensures that the work is substantial and aligns with the students’ interests. Technology like BlackBerry devices, wireless cards, and virtual office software allow employees to work from home occasionally or on a full-time basis. All of this has resulted in 90% of employees reporting that their flexible work environment helps them to better manage their work and family lives. AHCCCS explores each unique employee’s situation when deciding what type of flexible work option will best suit the needs of the employee and the needs of the organization. Turn over at AHCCCS has declined by 17% since implementing flexible work options while productivity has increased by 10%!

Arizona Small Business Association *73 | 72 | 75*Business Membership Organization*Winning Site: Phoenix, AZ, 10 Employees*www.asba.com

The Arizona Small Business Association may dedicate its work to helping small businesses succeed, but it, too, is a small business that needs to attract and retain the best and brightest employees. ASBA focuses on results, not time spent in the office. Employees are able to make up missed time, work externally and change their work schedules as needed. External work is facilitated by remote access, laptops and wireless cards. Flexible work schedules are also made possible through cross-training employees. If one employee needs to be out of the office for the day, another employee can step in to take care of any responsibilities. Providing employees with a “green room” for brainstorming and relaxation as well as recognizing victories big and small has resulted in high office morale. The ASBA also trains and guides its young employees with a mentoring program and one-on-one coaching. ASBA is a strong team of employees and it shows in their results—membership has more than doubled, from almost 5,000 to over 11,000 members.

Armao, Costa, & Riccardi, CPAs, P.C.74 | 75 | 77*Auditing, Tax and Financial Services*Winning Site: Garden City, NY, 30 Employees*www.acrcpa.com

Leaders at Armao, Costa, & Riccardi, CPAs, P.C. say it is not your average accounting firm! A strong sense of camaraderie among partners, accountants and staff fosters honesty, support of flexibility and trust. The firm provides internships for college students that have led to employment as junior accountants. Technology allows employees to work remotely at any time of day. Employees are also able to work compressed workweeks. Year-round social events, including a birthday party for every employee, create what the firm calls a “home away from home” atmosphere. Flexibility has greatly reduced stress, allowing employees to work in the way that works best for them. The firm has a good retention rate, low absenteeism and high productivity. The firm also has a great reputation in its community—people often remark how nice employees are!

Arysta LifeScience North America67 | 72 | 72*Chemical Company*Winning Site: Cary, NC, 70 Employees*www.arysta-na.com

Flexibility and wellness work hand-in-hand at Arysta LifeScience, a privately held agrochemical company. Employees at all levels have the freedom to manage both their work and family life with no set hours or work schedules. A cross functional Wellness Council helps employees make healthier choices for themselves and their families, eliminating the need to raise medical premiums. Within the workplace, an internal awards program has been introduced globally to help motivate performance excellence and spark friendly competition through peer nominations. This initiative has helped drive business results and allows employees to receive global recognition and rewards for their efforts. For the last three years, Arysta LifeScience was the only agrochemical business to be recognized in the Top 50 list of Family Friendly businesses by Carolina Parenting and has been awarded the Fit Friendly Award by the American Heart Association.

Leaders at AT&T Payroll Office learned the power of flexibility practices through firsthand experience. They discovered that many exempt managers were coming in late, leaving early and taking extended lunch breaks to attend to personal/family issues. Both exempt and nonexempt managers were also taking paid time off to attend to more serious life issues. The company hypothesized that these absences were more disruptive to the workplace than experimenting with alternate work schedules and telecommuting so they decided to run a trial with compressed workweeks for managers and flex time for employees. While the company was certain that flexible schedules would enhance work-life fit, there were concerns that those who did not participate in the program would be overburdened while others were out of the office. A survey at the end of the trial yielded much different results. Managers were more willing to cover for employees and communication had improved indicating that employees became more engaged. Being able to take care of personal lives allowed managers to be more present for the needs of their workplace. The success of the program throughout the location served as a model for managers across the organization and became the foundation of the company's proposed Flexible Workplace Policy. Now the company offers AT&T Connect that allows access to all meetings, presentations and shared resources from any computer at any time. The corporate telecommuting policy also defines resources available to telecommuters and allows employees to work from home. New managers now look forward to flexible work schedules while those who were "taken off" the policy for performance reasons, work hard to regain the flexibility. For employees with less flexible schedules, arrangements are made on a case-to-case basis to best customize a solution for the employee's need. These solutions include changes of schedule, remote work capabilities and transfer plans. Across the organization, these measures have increased performance and productivity proving that flexibility works.

Leadership from Aurora Mental Health Center (AuMHC) see that flexibility improves employees' engagement and that, in turn, improves the services clients receive. Many employees are in a work rehabilitation program and are hired on as regular employees when possible. Low-wage workers are also offered free bus passes to help ease the burden of commuting costs. New employees receive clinical supervision and training to ensure the best care possible is delivered to clients. Employees are also encouraged to take part in a leadership program offered by the Chamber of Commerce. Many employees who have completed leadership training with AuMHC and offsite have gone on to management positions. Some employees are able to work when and where they choose due to technology like laptops and cell phones. Employees can further engage with their work and the needs of the Center by creating their own innovative projects that are eligible for funding. AuMHC has found that turnover and absenteeism have decreased, as a result the Center experiences higher engagement and productivity.

This online auto parts retailer understands innately how important technology is to the modern workforce, both in getting work done and getting it done in a way that works for employees. LANs and WANs allow employees to work from an alternative location. Laptops, BlackBerry devices, and iPad devices also help employees work remotely. Autohaus uses automation of many of its work processes to help increase productivity and efficiency while decreasing errors. Internally, all functional areas have been redesigned with internally written interfaces/software to allow for improved multi-tasking, better asset management and maximum flexibility. Many of Autohaus' young employees and interns are recruited from area colleges. Young employees are offered higher-than-average starting pay, on the job computer training and benefits not often offered to entry-level positions. Shipping employees, whose work prevents them from using traditional flexibility options, can earn an extra paid day off each month by having the lowest number of shipping errors. By utilizing technology and flexibility to better run its business and keep its employees satisfied, Autohaus Arizona has experienced year after year of increased sales and market share, as well as low absenteeism, tardiness and next to zero turnover.

Averett Warmus Durkee Osburn Henning leadership believes that as long as communication and accountability are maintained, employees should experience a great deal of flexibility to take care of their families and personal needs. Remote access allows employees to log in from home and employees are encouraged to manage their own time. The firm also encourages employees to spend more time with their families during slower periods and part-time schedules are available for employees who want more time with their children on a regular basis. Administrative staff benefit from flexibility practices through flexible start and stop times and lunch hours that are broken in half so that employees can take care of personal errands. The organization has also developed a Leadership Development Program that eligible employees participate in to increase their skill set. Although the organization has a policy that partners retire at age 65, retiring partners are encouraged to remain a presence in the firm by continuing insurance benefits and office space until they are 70. "Retired" partners from other firms are also hired due to their expertise and ability to contribute to the firm in a positive manner. Low turnover and high employee referral rates let the firm know that they are on the right track.

Certified Public Accountants and Business AdvisorsWinning Site: Seattle, WA, 72 Employees*www.badermartin.com

Leaders at this local CPA firm understand that flexibility offers their employees a better way to deal with the demands and deadlines of tax season. Bader Martin offers flexible stop and start times and 20 days of paid time off in the first year of employment. Unused time can be rolled over into the following year allowing employees the ability to take longer vacations during slower periods in the year. Compressed workweek options are available so that employees can enjoy the summer months and part-time schedules are available to individuals who want to work full time during the busy season and then scale back during the summer and winter. Remote access helps employees work from home if the need arises, although the company encourages that when employees are on vacation, they lay their work down. Recently, the company has implemented a time-off program outside of its regular paid time off policy to give employees the opportunity to volunteer at local organizations. The firm also volunteers on many occasions outside of individual volunteer time. In addition, a charitable matching program has been implemented and has proven largely successful.

Professional Services, Accounting, Consulting
2,780 Employees in the U.S.
www.bdo.com

Leaders at BDO, an accounting and consulting firm with multiple locations throughout the U.S., see flexibility as a key part of their business strategy. All employees are able to use flexibility, keeping in mind their needs and the needs of the business. Though they have faced some challenges in providing flexibility to employees in administrative roles, 70% of those employees reported last year that they have the ability to use flexibility to manage their work and life. BDO has leveraged its flex program to allow workers nearing retirement to work schedules that meet their needs, including reduced hours, part-year work, and converting to independent contractor status where legally applicable. Job openings at BDO are posted on the American Job Exchange, specifically targeting disabled job seekers. The firm also takes affirmative action to hire and promote qualified disabled individuals and veterans. Veterans are eligible for up to 26 weeks of unpaid leave for medical treatment for an injury incurred while serving. The firm also grants up to 12 weeks of unpaid leave to employees who are family members of service members during their deployment. Almost all employees are able to work remotely thanks to laptops, internal instant messaging, remote voice mail availability, free GoGo inflight Internet, an internal social network and synchronized file exchanges. New employees are assigned a “buddy” in a similar job position to help them transition into their new job. Career advisors are also assigned to young employees. Employees responsible for child and elder care benefit from subsidized back-up care and access to a Parent Network with online and in-person resources and events. This year, programs established under BDO Flex were reviewed and retooled to more specifically meet the needs of employees such as new hires, administrative employees, managers and business leaders. Programs targeting employees with high potential, a desire for further career development, mentoring opportunities and a chance to work in other locations were also refined. With the myriad of programs and initiatives the firm has implemented, it’s no wonder that 87% of employees reported last year that both their managers and firm leadership are supportive in their use of flexibility.

Leaders at Bon Secours understand that health care can be a demanding, stressful job. Flexibility helps employees take care of themselves so that they can deliver the best care possible. For example, employees are now able to reduce their hours over the summer and return to regular hours in the fall without any changes to their job status or benefits. Bon Secours recruits from a variety of job fairs and has created a job-training program for individuals with autism spectrum disorders. Young employees are developed through a variety of training and leadership opportunities. Veterans benefit from an Employee Assistance Program and Bon Secours makes up employees' pay differential during military service. Mature workers benefit from being able to retire and then be rehired later without jeopardizing retirement checks. They can also "retire" at age 65, but continue to work part time while collecting a pension check or work past 70 ½-years-old and begin receiving a pension check in April of the following year, regardless of status. Patient mobility team also literally take much of the heavy lifting out of nursing jobs, allowing employees to continue their jobs while shifting physically difficult tasks to others. ConnectCare, the company's new electronic medical records system, takes the guess work out of handwriting interpretation and location and is accessible through any mobile device with remote access. Conference calls, laptops, air cards, remote access and Smartphones also help employees maximize time spent working flexibly. Options to work flexibly include part-time hours, job sharing, choice of shifts, flexible start and end time, and telecommuting. Wellness and education programs also benefit employees. Recent surveys reveal that employees are highly invested in their work; Bon Secours has a low turnover rate of 11.31%. The health care system has won the Sloan Award every year since 2006.

Leadership at Booz Allen, a management and technology consulting business, works hard to help its employees meet their responsibilities to their work and to their families. Flexibility options like reduced workweeks, flexible hours, telecommuting and other informal options let employees work in the way that's best for them. Remote access, personal laptops provided by the company, instant messaging, remote desk phone access, virtual meetings, teleconferences, online time keeping and access to e-mail, calendars and contacts from mobile devices or personal computers all help employees work remotely and stay in communication away from the office. In addition, employees have access to a 24/7 help hotline to troubleshoot on a variety of issues. A StayConnected program helps educate employees about all of these offerings. Mature workers lead the company's apprenticeship/mentorship programs that help develop workers with less experience and knowledge. Booz Allen also works with Emerging Leaders, an internship program for students with disabilities and a new Junior Employee Network in Booz Allen's Dayton office is helping employees with two or less years of work experience acclimate to the culture of the company and learn about career development. Fifty-five percent of the company's interns are hired full time after graduation. A comprehensive Military Recruitment Program actively targets military members and veterans, as well as their families and caregivers. While military members are on duty, Booz Allen continues their salaries for up to six months over a 12-month period. The company also offers continued insurance coverage for the military member's family while the employee is away on duty. An Employee Assistance Program offers a variety of services to military members and their families. Employee recognition helps keep morale high. A new program that relocates workers to offices nearest their own zip codes in an effort to reduce commuting has proven wildly popular and cited as one of the best elements of Booz Allen's work-life efforts. All of these efforts have paid off in the form of highly satisfied employees. In fact, 80% say their career manager cares about their individual success and 96% are proud of client focus and the quality of deliverables. Booz Allen has been recognized with several awards, including the Sloan Award.

Medical Services

Winning Site: Aurora, CO, 4,400 Employees

www.childrenscolorado.org

As one of the nation's premier pediatric hospitals, Children's Hospital Colorado leadership understand that staff satisfaction drives patient satisfaction—and flexible work is helping to make that happen. Flexible self-scheduling is offered, as well as a personal leave program, onsite child care and Early Learning Center, a low cost backup care program, tuition assistance, and assistance with setting career goals and succession planning. Onsite yoga, a Weight Watchers group, immunization and flu shots, and employee health services all help Children's Hospital Colorado employees stay healthy so they can do their jobs better and live better. Project SEARCH, designed for area high school students with disabilities, provides employment and education opportunities based on students' career goals and interests. In addition, a two-year Medical Career Collaborative Program is designed to help high school students of diverse backgrounds explore career options in the medical field. The organization also provides relocation assistance for returning veterans and their families, an Employee Assistance Program, and mentors to ease the transition back to civilian life. Some employees are provided with laptops, cell phones and other mobile devices. This enables telecommuting options, telemedicine consults and teleconferencing. Skype, cloud computing, Google Documents and Smartphones all allow employees to work remotely. Flexible scheduling options include trading shifts, picking up additional shifts, job share, and on-call and contract staff coverage. The Hospital is continually seeking internal feedback in the form of employee opinion surveys, as well as multi-disciplinary groups, committees and councils that provide input and aid in decision-making in many areas. High employee satisfaction scores contributed to the Hospital exceeding its 2011 financial, quality and service goals for its first Take it to Heart Incentive Program payout. The organization's voluntary turnover rate is also well below the industry's national average, at just 8.15%.

Christopherson Business Travel ****

Travel Agency

Winning Site: Salt Lake City, UT, 79 Employees

www.cbtravel.com

Utah's fastest-growing travel agency is committed to helping its employees work in whatever way is best for them—whether they want to work from home during nontraditional hours or come into the office 8:00 am to 5:00 pm. Over 20 years, turnover has stayed under 3%—far below the industry average of 20%. When one employee had to have his larynx removed the agency's IT team created a visual way for him to communicate with clients. It was such a success that now all employees use the program and the agency has trademarked the technology! Remote access, call forwarding and laptops and Smartphones provided to frequent travelers allow employees to work wherever they need to. This technology has also allowed the agency to hire the best employees from across the country. Employees are also able to relocate as needed and keep their jobs. The agency has grown from $1 million to $287 million over 22 years and has a corporate client retention rate over 95%.

Manufacturing – Durable Goods
Winning Site: Newberg, OR, 156 Employees
www.climaxportable.com

Climax Portable Machining & Welding Systems is making a series of investments: in new facilities, in new technology and in new ways to help their employees. Although its headquarters are located on the West Coast, the company has acquired an East Coast company, and is moving its offices to a new city. In order to keep commuting times down and retain current talent, the company is providing flexible options to work from home or reduce days spent in the office. Flexible working days and hours are also available to older employees so their invaluable knowledge can be passed on to less experienced workers. Recruitment and interviewing is done both domestically and internationally through Skype, Facetime or Video Teleconferencing and all technology options are being installed in their new East Coast facility to reduce travel time. Its “Gold Star” Community Campus program is a collaborative internship program, providing interns with business skills throughout 17 local companies and introducing them to different facets of the business community. This firsthand exposure also allows interns to bring new learning and new ideas back into the company, improving its marketing, safety, hiring, employee morale and community service efforts. The company's recent wellness programs have helped employees by removing unhealthy snack and beverage options from the facility and providing healthier options at company functions. Employees have stopped smoking, lost weight, paid for onsite classes like Zumba; and as a result, health insurance premiums have dropped for everyone.

Members of the Colorado Rocky Mountain Lions Club don't let conflict between work and family responsibilities keep them from improving their community. The club organizes via an online "e-clubhouse" so that members are able to contribute to the group during times that work best for them. Members don't need to travel to a physical location to attend meetings; they can either attend an in-person monthly meeting or keep in contact with the group through e-mail, video conferencing, an online message board and social networking sites like Twitter, Facebook and LinkedIn. Training seminars are also available online. Over the past year, the group has donated clothing and toiletries to the Denver Rescue Mission each month, donated to the American Diabetes Association, to International Hearing Dogs and to LCIF Measles Initiative/Coats for Colorado. The club has also assembled holiday food baskets and participated in the Aurora Highline Canal Cleanup with the city of Aurora. The Colorado Rocky Mountain Lions Club has been recognized as the most active in its zone, with participation in fundraisers and other activities having increased since introducing online organizing.

This marketing communication and brand identity organization thrives and grows on the strength of employee relationships with customers and one another. Employees at Core Creative Inc. believe that the most valuable, attractive brands inspire both customers and employees. Their focus on relationships and involving all stakeholders has led to the use of schedule flexibility to keep its employees engaged and inspired. Technology has allowed employees to get work done within a schedule that works for both their personal and professional needs. In addition, Core Creative implemented an "All-stars" program where employees were recognized on a weekly basis for promoting the agency's values. The employee would then earn points based on this recognition and could cash points in for valuable prizes. The program was highlighted in The Business Journal. The agency has also created a quarterly cause program called Coregives where time is spent volunteering and/or participating in walks for various causes. The agency's blog on Yammer helps to encourage internal discussions and the celebration of team successes. Not only have these initiatives resulted in reduced turnover, employees are also willing to work additional hours when needed.

Cornerstone Research Group, Inc. 80 | 73 | 77

Research and Development
Winning Site: Dayton, OH, 60 Employees
www.crgroup.com

Several "visits from the stork" prompted Cornerstone Research Group toward implementing flexible work. When a number of management-track employees became pregnant, the research and development service company knew that to retain these new parents it would need to expand their part-time options to allow for more flexibility when returning from maternity leave. Technology like company-provided laptops, printers, VPN access and cell phones keep employees connected no matter where they're working from. Instant messaging, e-mail, texting and video conferencing also keep communication easy and open. A Part-time Fixed working option enables employees to choose to work reduced hours while still receiving benefits and promotions. Even managers have used this option while maintaining (or even increasing!) their leadership roles. Mature employees are recruited to the firm regularly because of their wealth of experience and knowledge. The company has worked with disabled employees to accommodate their physical needs, as well as their individual needs for work flexibility. Despite the slow economy, CRG has been listed as one of the fastest growing companies the last five years and has previously won the Sloan Award, among other workplace excellence recognitions.

Retirement Consulting Firm

www.cpdltd.com

Like many employers in the U.S., Creative Plan Designs is still feeling the effects of a slowed economy. Unable to provide increased pay or bonuses, the firm has increased its flexible work options. Internship programs are offered to students and continuing education and training opportunities benefit staff, both those who are new and experienced. To help one employee in a difficult living situation, the firm paid the security deposit for her home, enabling her to move her children to a better environment. Creative Plan Designs also encourages ride sharing to reduce transportation costs. The firm often buys lunch for employees during busy times and offsite social events boost morale. Remote access, tech support and webinars help employees telecommute and work flexible hours. The office has been designed to be low-stress—employees can depend on each other to help share the workload and solve tough problems. As a result, absenteeism and turnover are almost non-existent. Creative Plan Designs has an excellent reputation in its industry, which it attributes to its engaged and productive staff.

Law Firm

www.cgwg.com

Cross Gunter Witherspoon & Galchus leaders understand that workplace flexibility increases both employee and management effectiveness and realize that there are no “cookie cutter” solutions. By providing Smartphones and paying for their monthly charges for attorneys and managers, the firm enables employees to answer e-mails conveniently and keep up with client requests without sacrificing quality time with their families. The firm also provides laptops and partial reimbursement for iPads to increase telecommuting capabilities. Employees have onsite massages available once a month and have access to a wide variety of personal services and amenities to cope with the demands of daily life. Services include couriers who run personal errands, computer assistance for personal home computers, free parking and use of the facility for personal events. The firm provides access to flexibility, flexible hours and alternate workweek schedules that result in three-day weekends every other week. Recently, the firm removed billable hour requirements from attorneys to allow more personal flexibility. While the firm is not covered by the Family Medical Leave Act, it voluntarily follows FMLA guidelines to allow 12 weeks of leave. The flexibility provided by both the company and fellow employees allows for employees with serious medical conditions to have proper coverage if they need to extend their absence and reduced schedules to help transition back to work if they wish to return. Associates on the Partner track can work reduced schedules without jeopardizing their position and paralegals can work from home as much as possible. A myriad of different options are also available for continued education, financial assistance through goods/services and reduced hours. The company works hard to customize requests and help its employees achieve personal satisfaction in work-life fit.

Decision Toolbox takes the flexibility of working from home to a whole new level. Employees' home offices serve as their only office as ALL work is done virtually. The company also develops all of its own web-based technology, bypassing the restrictions of packaged software. Employees are able to benefit from technology more customized to their professional needs and management can track progress without micromanaging teams. Even though all employees work remotely, Decision Toolbox is able to foster a more centralized community through virtual water cooler discussions, weekly team meetings, ongoing training and all-staff gatherings. Employees make additional connections through webinars or in-person gatherings. Other initiatives include a JobPoint System that leads to monthly awards, a Certification process to ensure proper job-related training, a Wish List that helps generate improvement of company processes, weekly internal "News Flash" e-newsletters, solution brainstorming sessions called "Cockroach Hunting" and a unique practice called "Sit and Sing" that encourages respect for other employees' time. The last late person to join a conference call or meeting must sing a few lines of a song to the rest of the group. Employees report being twice as productive working for Decision Toolbox then they have been in previous jobs.

Deloitte

Audit, Consulting, Financial Advisory and Tax Services

44,000 Employees in the U.S.

www.deloitte.com

Deloitte celebrates the diversity of its workforce throughout the year through its Heritage & History Month profile series. This series profiles Latino, Black, Asian/Pacific, LGBT, disabled and women professionals at all levels of the organization. Deloitte also offers a scholarship for students with disabilities at Chicago's DePaul University College of Commerce. Deloitte supports its military member employees by paying the differential between an employee's regular salary and their military pay for up 18 months per tour when an employee is called up for duty. The firm's Armed Forces Community connects military members within Deloitte and in the outside community. Deloitte has made a number of investments in technology that allow the firm to cut back on the need to be away from home without sacrificing collaboration or connection. Telesuites and videoconferencing rooms increase the firm's capacity for virtual meetings; call forwarding has been set up so employees can access work calls from their home phones; and mobile apps enable people to quickly access key Deloitte information and learning opportunities while on the go. Overseeing Deloitte's efforts on behalf of veterans and their families is its Armed Forces and Ability First Business Resource Groups and its Veteran Practitioner Program. The firm provides a liberal leave and benefits policy that allows Deloitte practitioners who volunteer or are called for service to honor their military commitments. New hires are paired with experienced practitioners and a Deloitte buddy is assigned to each applicant to the Junior Military Officer Recruiting Program, introducing them to a forum of former JMOs working at the firm and offering chosen candidates positions within two days. Their customized and flexible model for career development—Mass Career Customization—serves all employees, including veterans, by using a lattice approach that gives employees options for how, when and where they work through decisions about pace, workload, schedule/location and roles in the workplace. Another flexibility program, PERC (Personalize, Enrich, and Reward your Career), helps employees and supervisors find flexibility options to alleviate personal stress and work-life strain. Some PERCs have included fixed-end work times two days per week and extended lunch breaks twice per month to allow for volunteering. Flexibility options like these have contributed to Deloitte's earning numerous awards, including the Catalyst Award, Working Mother Magazine's "Seven Wonders of the WorkLife World," and the Alfred P. Sloan Award for Excellence in Workplace Effectiveness and Flexibility. Harvard Business Press also asked then-Chief Talent Officer Cathy Benko to co-author a book on Deloitte's MCC program, Mass Career Customization: Aligning the Workplace with Today's Nontraditional Workforce. Together, Deloitte's flexibility programs represent the varied ways of when, where and how today's employees work. They also have been named by DiversityInc Magazine as one of the "Top 10 Companies for People with Disabilities" in 2011.

DesignHammer Media Group LLC has leaders who believe that one of the keys to their success is trusting employees to set their own schedules and determine their own work processes. As long as quality work is being performed, it does not matter where it happens. A web-based project management system is accessible to employees from any location and high-quality wireless conference speakerphones allow any room to become a conference room. Employees have access to a well-stocked pantry and kitchen as well as company supplied drinks, snacks and meals alleviating the burden of having to store food from home or leave the office. This has led to more productive employees who are publicly recognized at company-wide staff meetings multiple times per month. In response to staff requests, a co-working facility is being subsidized by the company so that work can be done closer to home without having to work at home. Absenteeism and turnover have never been an issue.

Winning Site: Lindon, UT, 60 Employees

DigiCert is serious about keeping its employees happy and productive and its commitment shows! Employees receive one paid day per year to work at the charity of their choice, three paid maternity/paternity days, a paid day off for their birthdays (and an office party and gift!), one paid floating holiday, an annual paid trip to Disneyland for employees and their families, and a one week expenses-paid trip for each full-time employee that does not count against PTO to a destination of the employee's choosing. In addition, quarterly social events like game nights and service projects build camaraderie within the company. Young employees are recruited at university job fairs and the company offers an internship program. An internal wiki page helps employees access company information and problem solve technical issues. Technologies like Salesforce and call/voice mail forwarding have improved productivity and efficiency—especially for those employees who telecommute. Many employees are also given company-owned cell phones, allowing greater flexibility. Professional development is supported by quarterly reviews, seminars, and events in the office and offsite. Education assistance, financial planning advice and a wellness program that includes a “Biggest Loser” competition, softball team and reimbursement for gym memberships assist employees. As a result of treating its employees so well, DigiCert has an excellent reputation in their field and high levels of productivity. Stress and conflict in the office is low, there is virtually no turnover and sales are up due to high productivity. Market share has also increased—DigiCert is now the third largest provider of high-assurance SSL certificates.

Eastwood Bank instituted flexibility options to achieve a number of goals—to better the workforce, create higher engagement, keep turnover low and help the community by participating in volunteer events. When volume increased in the bank’s lending department, the bank allowed employees to go home in the evenings to spend time with their families and then log back on using bank-provided laptops to finish work from home. Technology has also allowed employees to work from home or other bank locations closer to their home during times of inclement weather. Employees are able to phase into retirement. College students can work flexibly around their class schedule and tuition reimbursement is offered. Non-officers are also granted four paid hours per quarter to perform community service. Officers are able to volunteer four paid hours each month to perform service. The bank also increased its already generous bereavement from five days to 10 days off with pay for the death of a spouse. Wellness initiatives like encouraging taking breaks, eating healthy and being active have been introduced. The bank has also added float coverage staff to help alleviate the stress that can come with unplanned time off. An employee survey shows that 75% of employees are engaged with their work and in response to the open-ended question, “What is the one thing I like about Eastwood Bank?” 17 respondents answered “flexibility.” Many job candidates have heard about the bank’s flex policies and even know it has won the Sloan Award!

Many of EDSI’s employees are in the reserves. The company makes up the pay differential between the employee’s salary at EDSI and his or her military salary. In some cases, EDSI has also helped cover additional expenses resulting from military service. Veteran employees are able to transition back to work in the case of disability incurred during service. Many of EDSI’s interns have gone on to become highly successful employees. The CEO and directors take special care to train top young talent for potential leadership roles. Videoconferencing has allowed many employees to cut back on travel and remote access enables employees to work offsite. Management employees use Smartphones to stay connected to the office while away and webinars and online training help develop employees at all levels. Leadership supports flexibility and it shows—90% of employees use some kind of flexible work arrangement. One employee now works out-of-state due to her husband's job relocation. Community service and fun events like laser tag and bowling keep employees' morale up. The company experiences very low turnover and absenteeism, as employees can work outside of traditional arrangements. Customers are kept happy and are always willing to give recommendations to potential new customers.

This professional employer organization in Provo, Utah keeps its employees happy and productive through flexibility programs, acknowledgement and fun social programs. Career development is offered to all entry-level employees and the ESG giving back program helps employees in times of financial need. Cross training and technology like GoToMeeting services, laptops and Smartphones allow employees to work more flexibly. Flexibility arrangements available include part-time work, job sharing and telecommuting. In addition, ESG offers generous PTO and paid bereavement. Employees who are unable to take advantage of typical flexibility are still able to control what shifts they work. An extensive list of volunteer projects that occur throughout the year gives employees lots of options for getting involved and have brightened ESG's reputation within its community. The company's wellness program covers the cost of a gym membership, as long as the employee goes to the gym at least 10 times each month. Fun activities like birthday parties, making snow angels and the occasional marshmallow fight keep the mood in the office relaxed. In exit interviews, employees have said that they valued the flexibility options offered. The company experiences low absenteeism, tardiness and turnover and has an excellent reputation within the community. This is ESG's fourth Sloan Award!

Flexibility is one of the core values of this strategic communication company. Teleconferencing, e-mail, Skype and other technologies allow employees to stay in constant contact and conduct remote meetings as necessary. The workplace is casual when not meeting with clients and, while expected to meet all mission requirements and attend all collaborative sessions, employees enjoy setting their own hours. ENC Strategy realizes that working as an effective team and delivering what clients need is not synonymous to micromanaging people for micromanagement's sake. This approach has helped the company achieve 112% growth in the past year.

Ernst & Young's leadership believes strongly in flexibility, strong teamwork, expansive learning opportunities, competitive pay and benefits, and two-way communication with leaders that come together in an engaged, cohesive culture in which its people thrive. Formal flexible work arrangements and informal flexibility are common in the firm. Though employees can sometimes worry that using flexibility could hurt their careers, EY employees are succeeding at their jobs and taking on greater responsibility while working flexibly. To date, more than 200 employees have been promoted to executive levels while on formal flexible work arrangements. Laptops for all employees, monthly allowances to cover connectivity costs, 24/7 access to technical assistance, videoconferencing, call forwarding, shared team calendars and instant messaging all help employees stay connected no matter where they're working. EY is also an employer of choice for those with disabilities. The company recruits and shares leading practices on recruiting individuals with disabilities. EY also collaborates with the National Business & Disability Council's Emerging Leaders internship program and careers fairs for students with disabilities. Campus recruiting and internship programs support young people's career development and extensive career coaching and development supports EY employees at all stages. EY is a member of 100,000 Jobs Mission, which pledges to collectively hire 100,000 veterans by the end of 2020. The Ernst & Young Veterans Network supports veteran employees and provides professional development, community service and peer-to-peer mentoring to its members. EY Assist, the company's employee assistance and life management services program, also offers a variety of services to veteran employees and their families. Subsidized back-up child care, tuition reimbursement and an initiative to help same-sex domestic partners' health benefits be more equitable also benefit employees. Ernst & Young has high employee retention, revenue and brand favorability. The company has used flexibility as a way to attract and retain the best employees and achieve its status as a top choice for professional services both in the U.S. and in global emerging markets.

Leadership at this staffing agency in Rochester understands that flexibility not only helps the business, but can also help ensure the livelihood, satisfaction and fulfillment of all employees. Employees are able to select their own schedules out of a set of shifts. All shifts must be covered, but the team is responsible for handling coverage. Web-based applications, a cell phone reimbursement plan, webinars and VPN access allow employees to work from different locations and during non-traditional hours. Certification, training programs and online classes on a variety of topics are available to employees free of charge. This year, Express has focused on its popular new wellness initiative, which gives all employees a paid extended lunch break (1.5 hours) to work out. Express pays the $75 membership fee to the Rochester Athletic Club for every employee. The average employee goes to RAC to work out during lunch 11 times each month and collectively staff members have lost 55 pounds since the initiative was implemented. Employees say that being able to work out during the day relieves stress, helps them re-focus and increases their productivity. This initiative helps employees feel better overall and has made Express the envy of many Rochester workers!

Leadership at First Alliance Credit Union puts it best when they say, “As organizations look to become resilient and agile, they have to start with having a creative and resilient workforce.” The credit union has moved employees nearing retirement into less stressful non-managerial jobs. Young employees are encouraged to join networking and professional development groups. Cell phones are provided to all managers and employees who need to work away from the office are issued laptops. iPads and iPhones have replaced credit union-issued laptops in some cases. Although front-line workers have set schedules, the team works together to ensure proper coverage when employees need to attend to family responsibilities like picking up children from school, taking a parent to a doctor's appointment or attending a school function. Some employees, who were working more than 40 hours per week, have been encouraged to take time for themselves by taking some half days. Though skeptical at first, these employees now look forward to their time away from the office and have become happier and more relaxed. Overall, the organization has lowered turnover rates and stress. The credit union is also growing steadily at 7-12% each year and adding 100 members each month.

Fleet Intelligence Training Center leadership understands that by providing the best for its personnel, it will get the best from its personnel. The organization's family-friendly environment permits an alternative work schedule involving nine-hour days (versus eight) while taking a day off every other week. This has proven to lower time off requests for family appointments and personal errands. With its execution of a Virtual Desktop Environment and experiments with cloud networking, personnel experience savings in time, ease in storage of their documents and ease in executing their lessons. The initiative also decreases the number of mobile training teams required of instructors, allows more time at home with families, decreases stress from traveling with sensitive materials and reduces stress related illnesses. Recognition initiatives include Civilian of the Year, the Hard Charger Award, SPOT Awards, Time Off Awards, performance appraisals and handwritten letters of approval from their Commanding Officer. These award programs show personnel their value within the command and motivate all to achieve their best. The organization also supports continuing education through subsidized trainings and tuition reimbursement. Personnel are provided with many leadership opportunities and the organization leads the Navy's Information Dominance Corps in innovation, job satisfaction and workplace flexibility.

FMYI, Inc.'s online collaborative tool provides a dynamic way for people to work together. This is no better illustrated than in the company itself. Recently, it has adopted a "No Limit Time Off" policy, giving their employees unlimited time off without banked limits. As long as deliverables are being fulfilled and there is agreement with teammates and management, employees can take time off as they need to. The company's online product also helps to make these absences seamless as all information and project developments are readily available. This recent institution is another step in the evolutionary chain first envisioned by founder and President Justin Yuen. He created the company with workplace flexibility as a driving factor and wanted to create an environment based on effective communication and trust in the workplace. FMYI, Inc. also enables employees to work from home and follow their spouses/partners to other locations. Not only does this help employees fulfill their personal needs, it also helps the company retain proven talent and attract new talent.

FosterThomas' employees are used to thinking on their feet, providing complete HR solutions for other companies. Employees are able to work from home, select their work schedules and receive flexibility from the management team as needed. They are also helped if relocation occurs, if family emergencies arise or if they need to work with the schedules of their children. In addition to remote access of company files and e-mails, the company installed a phone that operates over the Internet in a home office so employees don't incur the cost of company-related calls on their home phone. These options help employees work from any location and take care of the needs of their families. Telecommuting options also help the company bring aboard additional resources without worrying about workspace restraints or retain talent due to relocation. In addition to flexible hours, employees are able to reduce their work schedule to spend more time with their children during the summer months. FosterThomas supports employees who maintain their professional certifications and hold quarterly meetings to update the staff on the status of the company/new initiatives. The company's willingness to support their employees not only fosters greater productivity, it also fosters a sense of community as employees work to ensure that employees with more restricted schedules are able to enjoy flexibility.

Frankfort Regional Medical Center credits staff attitude and engagement as the primary reason for their success and accolades. But FRMC leaders also have been key in creating a positive and productive work environment. They utilize technology as a way to achieve workplace flexibility—for example, via electronic staffing software that assists managers, supervisors and employees with flexible scheduling—and also to make day to day operations more effective—their electronic medication system helps them achieve an error rate of 1 in 10,000 compared with the national rate of 1 in 100, their e-pom system allows physicians to place orders for labs and prescriptions quickly, and their digital radiology system allows physicians and nurses to view x-ray film onsite or from home). FRMC also piloted and helped build a new electronic health record system that will be initiated throughout the entire company nationally. They work specifically to recruit and retain older employees, employees with disabilities, and returning veterans and military families through the Army Pays program, as well as recruit and train a younger workforce. They also help employees who are experiencing financial hardship via their application-based Hope Fund (to which many employees donate). And they engage employees via an Employee Advisory Group, through which they garner and implement ideas. FRMC also awards quarterly incentive bonuses, hosts an annual service awards banquet and offers benefits such as reduced child care rates through Sitter City. It's not surprising that this medical center is growing quickly—it has opened a Level II nursery, cardiac rehab center and wound care clinic in just the last few years—and enjoys a low turnover rate, having won numerous accolades, including #1 Best Place to Work in Kentucky, the Alfred P. Sloan Award and the Magnet Nurse Quality Award.

The Frontier Project is a consulting firm specializing in innovative thought across a number of different markets. Within the company itself, this leadership is shown through the ability to forego traditional pathways toward productivity so that their employees can attain a more balanced lifestyle. A wireless environment composed of laptops, iPhones, Droids, iPads and a shared file server with remote access capabilities help employees connect from any location. Employees engage in monthly skill-building sessions and are encouraged to attend professional community conferences subsidized by the company. Cross-functional learning not only provides increased learning for younger employees, it also provides the ability for all employees to enjoy a flexible work environment—especially those whose jobs require more hands-on interaction on a daily basis. Consultants have an unlimited vacation policy, inspiring employees to maintain high standards of productivity and excellence so they can play hard when they are off the clock. This element of play is further cultivated in the company as they schedule time to play chess, checkers or cards with each other during the day to help employees return to their work energized and creative.

This accounting and tax services firm is always looking for new ways to help its employees reduce stress and better manage their responsibilities by listening and responding to their needs. Frost, Ruttenberg & Rothblatt has demonstrated a strong commitment to supporting mature employees as they transition into retirement by reducing their work hours. As these employees transition, they are able to retain their benefits, including health insurance. Most of FR&R's hiring is at the college level and is boosted by an intern program that allows flexibility for college students to complete their internships while maintaining their normal class and exam schedules. Technology is crucial in enabling employees to work flexibly away from the office. Cloud computing, VOIP (voice over IP), Smartphones and a Terminal Server give employees the ability to use their home computers for work. IT staff members are able to resolve issues for employees working outside of the office thanks to remote software. Training sessions are also available online and can be accessed anywhere. These technologies help make reduced and flexible schedules practical for employees. A variety of wellness programs, employee recognition, fun activities and charity work build teamwork and improve morale. Turnover at the firm is low and retention rates are high—20% of employees have been with the firm for more than 20 years! Absenteeism is a non-issue and productivity is high. Clients are also highly satisfied—in the 2012 Client Care Survey, the firm was rated 3.7 out of 4.0 on the attribute, "FR&R makes me feel like I/my business matters."

Gallagher, Flynn & Company recently won the honor of being one of the “Best Companies to Work for in Vermont” and the company attributes this success to their employee flexibility practices. Whether an employee is requesting leave time to be with their newborn child or needs to transfer to a part-time schedule as an hourly employee, the company has never denied a request. Even in the instance where one employee had to take extensive leave time to adopt a baby from Ethiopia, the company asked if other employees were interested in donating time and the response far exceeded her needs. In addition to requests, the company provides laptops and remote access to allow employees to work from home during the busy season and videoconferencing to reduce travel time to its sister division half an hour away. A quarterly, peer-driven recognition program rewards employees for best representing company values. Winners not only have the nominations read in their presence, they also receive a personalized gift basket. An annual community project gives employees the chance to give back to the community and the Donations Committee distributes $2,700 a year based on employee requests. Geonetric offers software solutions to health care companies and its leaders believe that supporting their employees directly affects the quality of the solutions they provide. Flexible schedules enable employees to create a schedule that works for their life—from coordinating child care drop offs to working around fitness training. Work-from-home options also help employees attend to sick children, deal with early school dismissals or avoid traffic during severe weather conditions. VPN technology creates a coordinated working experience by providing remote access and ways for teams to collaborate together. While employees are encouraged to take vacations, the company understands that plans are sometimes put on hold due to overwhelming to-do lists. In response to this, the company provides sabbaticals and an extra week of paid leave every two years, so that employees can come back refreshed and full of new ideas. Snacks and beverages including cereal, seasonal fruit, trail mix and drinks are available at all times; and during breaks employees can enjoy fresh popcorn from the company’s popcorn maker. The company provides inventive company events such as scheduled ice cream truck arrivals, quarterly chair massages and onsite Halloween trick-or-treating as well as other recreational options such as a basketball hoop outside the office or lunches where employees order pizza and watch an episode of “The Office” together. The Wellness Committee also organizes a Couch to 5k program and Wii bowling tournaments. Geonetric recently created Innovation Days where employees can work on fun work-related projects during regular hours. These projects not only give employees a chance to work on projects that constantly get pushed to the bottom of the to-do list, it also encourages cross-departmental collaboration. This spirit of collaboration is also evident in job sharing efforts to ensure flexibility for everyone and the company is presently working on enhancing its company-wide health and wellness initiatives.

Web hosting company Go Daddy is serious about making sure its employees enjoy their work, but at the center of the company is a commitment to four core values: take care of the customer above all else, hard work and individual accountability, never be satisfied, and working at Go Daddy means being a part of something special. These values are also reflected in Go Daddy’s many flexible work options and programs that are intended to bring out the best in employees. Go Daddy has sponsored virtual and in-person career fairs geared toward veterans. The company uses workforce management software to forecast customer service call volume, enabling the company to adequately schedule call center employees. Employees who are able to work remotely are provided with iPads, laptops, live streaming video, cell phones and webcams to match their technical needs. VPN access has also allowed more employees the ability to work from home and on the road. Along with its many programs for career development, employee-driven recognition and online education, the company also has its own “ThinkTank” Program where employees can submit ideas for new products and services. Office parties celebrate holidays and achievements with Go Daddy’s annual Holiday Party offering a bonanza of generous prizes for top performers with taxes subsidized by the company. Employee Appreciation Initiatives also promote team building through excursions such as whitewater rafting trips, spa days and indoor skydiving. The company provides flexible work options and wellness programs including generous paid time off, sick leave, paid maternity and paternity leave, onsite flu shots and biometrics screening, health coaching, short-term counseling, nutritious subsidized meals, onsite exercise and relaxation centers, and referral services. Many employees are able to work from the office location and hours of their choice, reducing commuting times. These initiatives have had a positive impact on the lives of employees. Each year, Go Daddy conducts an Employee Experience Survey. This past year, 89% of respondents said they intend to stay with Go Daddy for the next several years. The same percent said they feel they are able to satisfy both their job and personal responsibilities. Employees are happy—95% say they feel they belong at Go Daddy and are proud to work for the company!

Greenleaf Hospitality Group has recently expanded its flexibility offerings to include extended personal leave needed for education, family responsibilities, illness or military duties. In addition, the company has been able to offer more health care options for part-time employees. Employees are able to work from home as needed and can work flexible hours. The company retains mature workers by allowing them to work shorter hours. Greenleaf Hospitality also hosted a veteran career fair at one of its properties. Masters programs, job shadows, cross training and semi-annual success dialogues serve to develop young employees. Department sharing can help employees gain more work hours—if business volume decreases in one area, the company can help them find hours in another unit. An annual health fair provides free flu shots to employees and their families. Employee satisfaction scores have continued to increase, according to annual surveys.

Accounting Firm

Winning Site: Savannah, GA, 58 Employees

www.hancockaskew.com

One of the largest and oldest accounting firms in Savannah, Georgia, Hancock Askew & Co. has used flexibility to grow its business while serving its people. As an accounting firm, parts of the year are much busier than others. To help ease stress during the busy season, the firm provides lunch, dinner, coffee and ice cream every day. In the summer, when business is not as busy, the firm gives all employees four flex days and encourages them to take several long weekends. Year-round flexibility is made possible through laptops with remote access and wireless, videoconferencing, cell phones, BlackBerry devices and iPhones as appropriate. The firm also reimburses child care costs. Employees who do not normally receive flexibility due to the constraints of their jobs are also offered other flex arrangements. For example, administrative personnel are offered two days off after the busy season ends. One assistant will volunteer to cover those two days, and then is given two alternative days off. Employees who need to attend work events on evenings or weekends are given the option to come in late the following morning. Flexibility is given to veterans and their family members. When another firm merged with Hancock Askew & Co., each person was assigned a “merger buddy” to help ease the transition for all involved. Leadership at the firm believes these initiatives have had a positive impact on employees and on the firm as a whole. The firm has experienced low turnover, medical costs and absenteeism. The firm’s reputation has also increased for the better and leadership members believe it was the firm’s reputation that led to a successful merger.

Nonprofit Social Services OrganizationWinning Site: Winona, MN, 380 Employees*www.hco.org

Home and Community Options provides support and residential services to people with developmental disabilities in order to enable individuals to live as full members of their communities. The facility makes arrangements with older employees to meet their social and health needs and works with Winona Occupational Rehabilitation Center to hire individuals with developmental disabilities. Students at area universities and colleges make up a large part of the workforce. HCO works with these students in response to their class schedules and educational needs. A Competency Based Training Curriculum helps employees deliver the best care to clients. An e-mentor program provides additional resources for high school students and the facility provides education opportunities for its low-wage employees. Employees are able to access their worksite material from home and through smart home technology nursing and on-call staff can interact with clients/homes from any secure connection. Flexible schedules are available; for example, parents are able to alter their work schedules during the summer months when children are home from school and workers with elder care responsibilities are able to take time to attend to those needs during regular working hours. HCO takes excellent care of its employees and its patients—the average length of employment for leadership positions is 14.7 years and 96% of job applicants come to HCO by word of mouth.

Recruiting FirmWinning Site: Spokane, WA, 16 Employees*www.humanix.com

In an industry where staff retention tends to average under two years, Humanix—a staffing and recruiting company of 25 plus years—enjoys an average staff tenure of over 8.5 years. Humanix puts their staff first by providing customized work schedules and benefits that impact work and home. Flexibility options include the ability to work remotely, Skype in for conference calls, flex start/finish times, reduce hours, and even bring kids and pets to the office. They also have implemented cross training and backup support to offer more flexibility for switchboard and front office staff who tend to have less flexibility. Humanix also supports their staff through non-interest loans to help reduce financial stresses at home, as well as wellness, stress reduction and financial literacy initiatives. They also model the power of paying it forward through regular nonprofit support and by encouraging staff members to take advantage of their 20-hours of paid volunteer time each year.

This managed print services company has leaders who know their team members are at the core of their success and that their individuality makes a difference in the company. The company has established annual goals to increase job satisfaction, including greater flexibility, profit sharing plans, training and education, team activities and a company goal of raising $1,000,000 for autism by contributing a portion of revenue to the cause. Many employees have been able to adjust their work to part-time hours or to work from home. Owners, managers and technicians stay connected via home work stations, video conferencing, remote access and Smartphones. The company has experienced reduced turnover, improved employee retention, stronger cohesiveness and higher productivity. Image One has also won several awards for workplace excellence.

This Florida-based staffing and recruitment agency's leadership believes in promoting a dynamic company culture of honesty, commitment to excellence, team-focused fun and community involvement through work-life fit and flexibility. The company has built strong programs that foster and recruit employees with disabilities and returning veterans. Mentoring programs help the career development of younger employees. To provide access from Smartphones and any desktop, investments have been made in remote access. This increased access helps employees function whether they are traveling, working from home or in any other circumstances. Cross-functioning teams also allow for all members of the company to enjoy flexible work arrangements. Fun and team building are fostered through Really Random events including Valentine's Candygram fundraisers, Barbeque western lunches, Hubbard House Domestic Violence Awareness "Wear Purple" Day and Breast Cancer Awareness "Wear Pink" Day. Full-day events begin with employee excellence awards and end with beach Olympics or a baseball game. Finally, monthly "All Hands" meetings provide business updates, additional recognition opportunities and direct communication with leadership. In a company survey, 92% of employees showed that they were highly satisfied with the company's programs and benefits—a great indicator that Incepture is fulfilling its people and its goals.

Actuarial ServicesWinning Site: Beaverton, OR, 20 Employees*www.independentactuaries.com

Independent Actuaries has increased its flexible workplace arrangements by moving the company toward a “paperless” environment and providing remote access to employees. With this move, employees are able to better optimize their time between work and family. As retirement plan professionals, multiple retirement benefits are offered for older employees on top of flexible work schedules, part-time employment and a personal leave of absence for employees who have been with the company for five years. For younger employees, there are many cross-training opportunities that not only enrich their skill sets but allow them to help out other employees whose schedules do not lend themselves to traditional flexibility practices. One initiative open to all employees is the “8 hour project.” All employees are given eight paid work hours to work on a project of their choosing. This creative idea is mutually beneficial in that employees get a chance to pursue something of personal interest and many of the projects become initiatives that benefit the company. Each employee is able to choose a schedule that works best for them (i.e., full time, part time, half days and compressed workweeks) and a policy is in place for times when employees need time off for family related issues. All of the company owners have families and understand the importance of managing work and family.

Infincom works to create a work environment that nurtures a culture of cooperation, mutual trust and support, and the sharing of common goals that center on integrity and customer service. Company leadership trusts employees to meet their work responsibilities without micromanagement. Employees of all ages and experience receive mentoring opportunities with their direct supervisors. The president is also involved in mentoring young employees. All employees are provided with a laptop and have remote access to the company’s network, public files and e-mail. Field service representatives are also given iPhones capable of accessing the company’s internal computer network. They are also able to manage their own daily schedules and are assigned customers in their geographical region to help reduce commuting times. Fun events, charity involvement, games and employee recognition have all contributed to low levels of stress in the office. Infincom has low rates of turnover and absenteeism and high levels of performance. They have won several awards, including the Sloan Award in 2010 and 2011.

InGrid Design LLC

InGrid Design LLC's leaders believe that flexibility is key to its success and that freedom gives employees the wings to grow as professionals. They have found their employees to be much more productive when operating within their own time preferences and have found that clients benefit as well, given that the variability in staff work hour preferences means that staff typically responds any time of day or night. Flexibility is achieved through cell phones, laptops and VPN access; employees with children, in particular, appreciate the flexibility to work from home rather than take a personal day off when a child is sick. Wellness also is promoted through the option to participate in fitness activities ranging from weekly sessions with a trainer to yoga. As a result, InGrid Design LLC recently has received accolades such as the GLI Emerging Minority Business Award and the NAWBO Woman Business Owner of the Year Award.

Leadership at Intermountain Financial Group works hard to create an environment with a strong work ethic while providing ways for employees to better manage their work and life responsibilities. For example, when employees began to feel that meetings were running too long and pushing into their time at home, leadership found ways to redesign meetings and consolidate information. The firm has a paid internship program and many interns are hired full time upon graduation. Although no formal policy exists, employees are able to work from home and bring their children to work when needed. The paperless work environment and remote Intranet access enable employees to work from home. The firm also provides continuing career education, philanthropic opportunities and networking group participation. Stress and conflict in the office is minimal and camaraderie among employees is plentiful.

When employees have had family emergencies outside of the country, they've been able to work remotely while attending to these family responsibilities. Brown bag lunch trainings by other employees, cross-training, outside training and schooling opportunities help promote professional growth for employees at all career stages. Daily flexibility and telecommuting are strongly supported by company leadership and help keep employees happy, healthy and engaged in their work and family lives. Even the receptionist can work flexibly through compressed workweeks. Leadership believes this commitment to the health and wellness of their employees has resulted in lower stress and higher productivity.

Insurance CompanyWinning Site: Lexington, KY, 197 Employees*www.kemi.com

Kentucky Employers Mutual Insurance encourages work-life fit in its own policies. Liberal vacation and holiday policies are provided and the company encourages employees to spend time completely away from work, maximizing quality time with family and friends. The absence of a sick leave policy allows employees to take care of themselves and their loved ones without the constraint of set days and workplace penalties. The company leadership finds that regardless of the unlimited nature of this initiative, employees average less than three days per year of absence due to personal illness, family illness and tardiness combined. This is a demonstration of respect and appreciation. For employees whose jobs do not lend themselves to remote work, rotating schedules are built between units to ensure that everyone can take advantage of flexible hours or compressed workweeks. Occasional employee appreciation events, annual health fairs, employee game week with prizes and interactive board games provide a sense of fun and camaraderie across the organization. Employees are also given 16 hours of paid time to volunteer during normal business hours, enabling employees to get involved and give back to the community.

Technology CompanyWinning Site: Louisville, KY, 32 Employees*www.kizan.com

As a high technology company, KiZAN is inherently attuned to using technology to improve employee effectiveness and efficiency. Employees have remote access to servers and workstations from almost anywhere, and a Sharepoint portal allows employees to access everything from the time-entry system to benefit information to client information. Remote access and phone/LiveMeeting conferencing technologies allow employees to work and collaborate from any location, and they consider all employees—from developer to CFO—as being able to achieve workplace flexibility. Employee performance assessment is based on job effectiveness, not on hours worked or how often employees are in the office. Because so many employees work remotely, KiZAN frequently hosts “Just Because” events that allow employees to get together outside of the workplace to foster teamwork. These efforts have cultivated a loyal workforce and a company with a reputation for being a very positive place to work, a continual stream of family and friend job applicants, and a steadily decreasing turnover rate since 2005.

KPMG emphasizes a culture of flexibility in which employees have the ability to manage their personal and work responsibilities. This is apparent through the multitude of programs offered to recruit and retain all employees. Older employees serve as advocates, mentors and role models for younger professionals. Flexible work schedules, telecommuting, back-up elder/adult care services for employees and partners in all U.S. offices, and long term care insurance all enable KPMG's employees to better manage work and family care responsibilities. KPMG works with state organizations to hire veterans and assists veterans looking for jobs more broadly by providing resume writing and interview practice. KPMG's Abilities in Motion Network focuses on fostering an inclusive work environment for people with disabilities, their caregivers and people living with or caring for someone with a chronic illness. For new employees, on-boarding associates are assigned to new hires to help them with everything from benefits enrollment to expense reporting. To stay connected while away from the office, KPMG employees use online meeting software, PDAs, laptops, a Virtual PC application, online collaboration tools and teleconferencing. Wireless aircards are also given to employees who work remotely so that they can have reliable and fast access to KPMG's network. These technologies enable employees to take advantage of a wide range of alternative work arrangements, such as full-time hours, compressed workweeks, flex time that enables eligible employees to alter their start and end work times with their managers' approval, telecommuting from an alternative location one or two days per week, job sharing, phased return from leave, reduced workload/part-time work, and other individualized informal flex options. In addition, KPMG has developed many support programs such as Global Training, National Diversity Networks, Employee Career Architecture and People Management Leaders to ensure that employees can seamlessly transition into different aspects of their careers and the company. Various community service programs and award recognition programs also allow employees the opportunity to give back to their communities and be recognized for their contributions to the company. KPMG employees are happy—and becoming even more happy! Employee morale survey data shows that morale has continuously improved as KPMG has implemented its various flexible work initiatives. More than two-thirds of employees surveyed say that KPMG is a great place to work and build a career.

This marketing and communication company has developed a number of committees and programs that provide greater flexibility for employees. The Employee Engagement Committee finds new ways to locate and implement meaningful changes through company-wide training sessions, social gatherings and surveys. The company's new Flex time Fridays is one of the initiatives that emerged from the committee's efforts. This program enables employees to choose their Friday work hours so that they can manage their responsibilities and leave work early. Some employees work permanent flexible schedules that allow them to tailor schedules for personal needs or family responsibilities. Additional time off is available to take care of family as well. A new Website called LULU (Labov University for Learning & Utilization) encourages employees to continue learning and to share their knowledge with other employees. During the process, employees gain points that not only help the company measure the employee's commitment to learning, it is also used as a guideline when employees request to attend outside seminars or programs. ELBEE (Extraordinary LaBov & Beyond Employee Engagement) also helps reward employees who exceed expectations on a monthly basis. In addition, a new Employee Room with comfortable furniture has been established so employees can meet with other employees, relax or work. Employees are provided laptops and Smartphones to work remotely and GoToMeeting and Skype help employees connect with others who work from home or from other offices.

Laughlin Constable, a full-service advertising agency with offices in Chicago, Milwaukee and New York, uses workplace flexibility as a management tool to enhance workplace effectiveness while contributing to employees' success and improving their quality of life. Technology allows business to continue as usual when employees are away from the office. Some employees receive compensation for their Smartphone costs, while a WFH Internet access portal and e-mail that can be accessed remotely and offsite voicemail recovery allow employees to work from outside of the office. These technologies enable a variety of flexible work options, including flexible work hours, flexible summer hours, part-time work, and the ability to ease back into work after sick, FMLA or maternity leave. Cross training also allows employees the ability to enjoy more time with their family and loved ones and builds a deeper base of talent within different teams. Laughlin Constable maintains strong relationships with area colleges and universities and invites students to visit the company. The agency offers internships to college students and many times these students are hired full time upon graduating. Fun spaces, free breakfast on Wellness Wednesdays and free yoga classes once per week all keep morale high and employees healthy. Employees are also able to tailor their company benefits, manage their health care costs and choose from a list of voluntary benefits such as AFLAC and Voluntary Life Plans. Laughlin Constable enjoys low turnover, low absenteeism and high productivity thanks in part to its commitment to flexible work and has won several awards for workplace excellence.

Leaders at Machen McChesney & Chastain understand that as an accounting firm, long, strenuous work hours are to be expected during tax season. To address this expectation, the firm has put in place flexibility practices to avoid employee burnout and enable employees to spend quality time with their families. To reduce this seasonal stress, additional part-time employees allow regular full- and part-time employees to continue having the flexible schedules they have during non-peak times. Full-time employees are able to work additional hours on one day and work reduced hours on another. Part-time employees are able to shift their “normal” hours as frequently as they wish in order to meet child/family needs and take vacation. From May to August, full-time employees are able to work up to nine-hour days Monday through Thursday in order to take Friday afternoons off. This enables employees to take care of personal errands without interfering with their weekends. Cross training and additional staffing also enable administrative assistance the opportunity to take advantage of flexibility practices. Smartphones, laptops and remote access enable employees the opportunity to work from home when family emergencies arise and Machen McChesney & Chastain finds that its practices result in quality work and better time between work and home, even in the busiest of seasons.

This financial services company continually adapts and changes as its employees communicate their needs. The flexibility provided by the company not only emphasizes employee well-being, it also becomes an attractive benefit for future talent. Young talent is also supported through mentoring programs, significant levels of continuing education onsite and offsite, subsidized exam costs, and funding and resources for participating in the community. All employees enjoy a great deal of autonomy through a sophisticated paperless system, technology that allows work to be done remotely and an expanding teleworking system. Even the administrative team is empowered to “manage themselves,” making sure that all necessary tasks are covered if anyone needs time off. One team member was even able to take a two-month medical leave without the company having to hire additional staff. The leaders learned from this example that empowering people through trust and a fair system of rewards leads to great results for everyone. Employees are encouraged to serve on committees that plan activities and volunteering opportunities; supported by the company with financial resources, time off and recognition on the company Website. Web-based training programs allow for flexible training and development schedules, and an investment in these programs along with big screen televisions and comfortable conference facilities have proven to be very successful. In return for these investments in their people, the company experiences high productivity, no increases in medical costs over the last two years, and low turnover and absenteeism.

Leaders at Management Recruiters of Chattanooga-Brainerd understand that turnover is high in the industry of recruiting. So the company makes every effort to provide a place where its employees are given control over how, when and where they get their work done. Technology is considered a key to this success. In addition to flexible schedules, employees have remote access to their work computer and company files from any computer or Smartphone. The company has a signature working families program where employees can come in after they drop their children off at school, leave in time to pick them up or be there when they get home. While it is not a direct policy, the company encourages employees to “turn off” during family time (vacation, meals, events, etc.). The productivity of employees due to these initiatives has allowed the company to surpass revenue goals, improve its market share and increase its standing within the MRI organization.

Mango Salon leadership believes in fresh concepts for both clients and employees. One of their core values is that if their team is taken care of, the business will take care of itself. Many of their programs and initiatives were built with employee input, helping them feel heard and a part of positive change within the company. Managers are seen more as coaches and quarterly coaching sessions help employees manage their schedules, review career goals through the organization's CareerPathing program and avoid burnout. VPN remote access is available so that employees can look at their schedules from any location and request to come in late or leave early if their schedules are not booked. A team portal also gives employees access to company information and educational opportunities, especially with Mango Academy's advanced onsite education program that keeps employees up to speed on current trends and techniques. The management works to respond to all schedules, allowing their employees to take care of themselves and their families. Some employees have been able to utilize paid time off in advance of their accrual in order to meet their personal needs and mothers returning from maternity leave are provided part-time schedules in order to have more time with their newborn children. A paid half hour break can be taken at the employee's discretion and the company provides paid time off days versus sick, vacation and personal time so that employees have more control over how their time off is used. Mango Me Healthy provides resources and contests toward maintaining a healthy lifestyle and an extra paid time off day is given to employees if they go six months without a sick day or family emergency. In addition to these benefits, the company offers medical, dental, life, vision, long-term disability, AFLAC programs, and a 401k with profit sharing—an unusual offering in the salon business.

As a group that provides education to the CPA and financial planning industry, leaders at Matthews Benefit Group value the importance of education for their employees. As the company begins to pilot its remote access capabilities to increase workplace flexibility, it invests in professional development to provide greater opportunities for employees down the road. Every employee has been introduced to training, supervision and coaching through the company’s Comprehensive Training Program. A specialized performance plan includes the professional development goals for each employee, including supervisors, and a variety of programs in Retirement Plan Administration and management skills are available to achieve these goals. As employees learn, they pass their knowledge back and forth between employees and managers, creating a symbiotic environment. The company’s Professional Certification Program allows employees to work toward leading credentials in the industry and 100% of employees participated in this voluntary program despite initial concerns around study time and test-taking anxiety. The pride and accomplishment reported by employees as they passed their exams soon outweighed their concerns. In addition, the company provides flexible solutions for employees’ needs through work-from-home arrangements whether it is for personal health reasons or for the care of a family member. Leaders at Matthews Benefit Group believe in both corporate and charitable giving and have formed a relationship with the St. Petersburg Free Clinic. Not only does the clinic benefit from the donations of the employees, they also benefit from direct employee participation on their Board of Directors. This initiative helps employees give back to their community and provides a change of pace.

McCauley Nicolas, CPAs & Advisors *71 | 70 | 72*Certified Public Accountants and Advisors*Winning Site: Jeffersonville, IN, 52 Employees*www.mnccpa.com

Flexibility is a core value for public accounting firm McCauley Nicolas, CPAs & Advisors. Over 50% of staff (not including owners) has been with the firm 10 or more years and 20% for 20 or more years. Their turnover rate for the past four years is 11%, compared with an industry standard of around 20%. Their leaders attribute this loyalty to their commitment to giving employees as much control over their time as possible. They are extremely supportive of the unique needs of employees with young children and maintain a “culture of trust,” in which they believe that employees will make wise decisions when it comes to managing client service and personal need. McCauley Nicolas, CPAs & Advisors also recognizes that the deadline-oriented nature of their business is stressful and offer personal care onsite benefits such as massage therapy, flu shots, dry cleaning pickup/delivery, healthy eating initiatives, professional development initiatives such as a formal mentoring program and educational opportunities, and social/community events such as firm picnics and parties and involvement in philanthropic events such as the Big Brothers Big Sisters annual Accountants Bowl For Kids’ Sake and ACS’ Making Strides Against Breast Cancer walk. McCauley Nicolas, CPAs & Advisors subsequently makes a positive impact both in their office and community, and have ranked among Louisville’s Top Workplaces for 2011 and 2012.

McKinney *77 | 74 | 77*Advertising Agency*Winning Site: Durham, NC, 189 Employees*www.mckinney.com

As an advertising and marketing company, leaders at McKinney are used to harnessing the power of creative thinking. They turn that thinking inwards to build a framework of flexibility that empowers employees at home, at work, and in their communities. Through desktop technology and open communication with managers, telecommuting and teleconferencing arrangements can always be made to respond to personal needs such as doctor appointments and child care arrangements. The McKinney 10% program gives employees the power to develop innovative work projects that they feel passionately about. Projects from this program have received recognition by the Webby Awards, an international award for excellence across the Internet. In partnership with Urban Ministries of Durham, McKinney created an on-line game called SPENT that challenges users to survive poverty. This year, McKinney’s Triangle Corporate Battle of the Bands campaign will raise funds to support KidzNotes, an organization that provides instruction in classical orchestral music to East Durham’s poorest neighborhoods. These creative campaigns and McKinney’s overall benefits help attract top talent.

Mediascope *67 79 76*Mailing, Bindery and Fulfillment Services*Winning Site: Winona, MN, 21 Employees*www.mediascopeinc.com

Mediascope's philosophy is that if you are a happy person, you can be a happy and productive employee. To keep its employees happy, Mediascope enables occasional telecommuting for most employees through e-mails, voicemail and files that can be accessed remotely. The company even has one part-time employee who works exclusively away from the office. Mediascope promotes innovative thinking by offering bonuses to employees who improve efficiencies and reduce production time. The addition of a second shift of work has allowed employees greater control over scheduling. Mediascope leaders believe that if employees are happy they will do good work and produce a quality product for customers—making customers happy and helping the business thrive. The company has been able to expand over the past two years and has added new service areas. These new services have bolstered its reputation as a provider of quality services.

Winning Site: Portsmouth, NH, 30 Employees
www.meetingmatrix.com

MeetingMatrix International has created a unique program fully integrated into the culture of its business to manage workplace flexibility. Task Inspired Management Environment (T.I.M.E.) dictates that work is not about going to a place, but about completing tasks. Thus, all employees are free to work when they want, where they want and in the way they want. There is no vacation or sick time; employees are expected to communicate honestly and plan ahead for their absences by designating someone as their “back up” so that others’ work isn’t impeded by their time off. Almost all meetings are optional if the employee submits his or her input ahead of time and reviews meeting minutes afterward. In addition, any employee can attend any internal meeting. Out of respect for everyone’s schedules, meetings start and end promptly at designated times. Results are the most important factor of employees’ work—not when or where work gets done. Due to T.I.M.E., turnover is almost nonexistent. Leaders find that employees are glad to work in an open and honest atmosphere.

Metropolitan Family Service *79 | 74 | 77*Nonprofit Social Services Organization*Winning Site: Portland, OR, 78 Employees*www.metfamily.org

Metropolitan Family Service is committed to providing services, resources and opportunities to the families of the Portland, Oregon area. But its commitment begins by supporting the family within their own organization. Flexibility through schedules, telecommuting and mentorship programs provide employees enriching work regardless of where they are. Recently, they have expanded their workplace options to include compressed workweeks (four ten-hour days). Another creative initiative is the revision of job expectations to respond to employees challenged by personal circumstances—while responsibilities are reduced for a period of time, wages and benefits are not. Metropolitan Family Service celebrates families of all kinds and offers benefits to employees that may not have family members, as defined by blood ties or the law. Employee satisfaction has resulted in low utilization of traditional health care benefits, but employees take full advantage of the organization's preventative and alternative care health plan options such as acupuncture, naturopaths, chiropractors and massage therapists.

www.michigan.gov/miosha

MIOSHA's flexibility arrangements have been so successful that the organization's leaders have been asked to share its policies with other government agencies and to help them introduce more flex options for their employees. Employees of MIOSHA can work compressed workweeks or telecommute. Some employees are also able to flex their start and end times and supervisors work with employees to informally change work hours to respond to personal and family needs on a case-by-case basis. Secretaries who would not normally be able to work flexibly can trade off with staff from another division to alter start and end work times. Project-based telecommuting also enables employees to work from home on a project basis, arranging remote work for a number of hours or days. Remote work is made possible through the use of wireless Internet, laptops and tele-/video- conferencing. After an influx of new employees, MIOSHA used the opportunity to conduct a culture survey and is using the results to improve its training and orientation programs.

Veterans, military members and their families are allowed extra flexibility to attend to family and personal needs. Flexibility has had a positive impact on employees throughout the organization and has resulted in very low turnover and favorable productivity as compared to other federal OSHA and state-run OSHA programs.

MorganFranklin Corporation has received repeated recognition for its workplace flexibility and health practices from organizations such as the Alliance for Workplace Excellence, the American Heart Association and the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation. Examples of its practices include flexible scheduling arrangements, tuition reimbursement, personal days, floating holidays, jury leave, bereavement leave and technology that enable employees to work from any location. In 1998, MorganFranklin Corporation began its commitment to bettering the communities of clients and employees through community involvement and assistance with health issues, specifically cancer and heart health. But after years of growth, its corporate social responsibility (CSR) efforts grew unwieldy. The company recognized the need to better define its company's CSR program and align the program with its corporate culture and philosophy. Its efforts have led to a program that includes an annual corporate giving program, contributions of nearly $175,000 to support more than 40 organizations, an employee volunteer program, Gift Programs, and programs that focus on women's issues and development. Employees are encouraged to participate in annual food and clothing drives, various walks and runs, care packages for deployed soldiers and programs that teach youths fundamental skills for successful careers. The company's flagship CSR endeavor is the annual MorganFranklin Golf Classic benefiting the Wounded Warrior Project. This popular, sold-out event in addition to generous cash donations, help the men and women of the armed forces who have been severely injured in conflicts around the world. MorganFranklin's CSR program fosters a strong charitable culture that attracts and retains employees who are passionate about volunteerism.

Morrison & Associates CPAs ***

Accounting FirmWinning Site: Phoenix, AZ, 17 Employees*www.maacpa.com

Leaders at this construction accounting firm in Phoenix, Arizona understand that each individual employee has his or her own needs when it comes to flexibility. And often, it's not difficult to respond to requests in a way that still enables work to get done. When one employee took extended time off to have a baby, a part-time position was added to make her needs feasible. Another employee was able to move and continue working full time in Oregon thanks to increased remote access capabilities. A retiring employee was able to slowly reduce her working hours to part-time status. Hands-on training and tuition reimbursement help young employees increase their education in and out of the office. Remote access, video conferencing and iPads for management all help employees stay in touch and allow them to work from home when the need arises. Leaders understand they can attend to the needs of employees while providing a high-quality client experience. Openness to change and creative problem solving really helps flexibility go the extra mile for employees. This commitment to supporting employees showed in the annual satisfaction survey: Employees reported an average satisfaction level of 3.8 out of five points. In 2011, the firm’s voluntary turnover rate was 0%. Having created a great place to work has made Morrison & Associates CPA an employer of choice with an excellent reputation in its industry.

Supporting the personal and professional needs of personnel is a high priority to Naval Support Activity Hampton Roads. The organization now has three facilities and enables personnel to transfer among these facilities to reduce travel commute time, fulfill professional requirements/training and attend to health related family emergencies. Social media also helps the organization communicate with the community and receive feedback on how to increase flexibility and effectiveness. Former veterans looking for Government work are heavily recruited and when applying for Government employment within USAJOBS, veterans with disabilities are given higher priority for employment than veterans without disabilities. A Transition Assistance Program (TAP) helps returning veterans transition from military to civilian employment and Return and Reunion Seminars are available to all personnel returning from tours of duty away from their families. These seminars help personnel cope with a number of symptoms related to being away from their normal support system/family members. An Ombudsman assists the needs of military families and low-wage military members have access to many free/low-cost opportunities including Commissaries and Exchanges that have goods at lower prices with no tax included. The organization's Morale, Welfare and Recreation committee comes up with fun and innovative ways to relieve stress and participation in charitable causes and local schools is heavily supported. In 2011, the organization received two Together In Education (TIE) awards for its support of local schools.

Young employees benefit from tuition reimbursement, management coaching and mentoring. Financial counseling, interest-free loans for the purchase of personal computers, an Employee Assistance Program and emergency fund help employees better manage their finances. The provider also covers 100% of health, dental, vision, short- and long-term disability and life insurance. Employees can work from home when necessary, such as in the case of bad weather. Northeast Delta Dental has very low voluntary and involuntary turnover and retains 97% of its customers. The biannual employee survey reveals that 86% of employees are satisfied with their work overall.

Northwest Energy Efficiency Alliance

Nonprofit Environmental OrganizationWinning Site: Portland, OR, 67 Employees*www.neea.org

Northwest Energy Efficiency Alliance has two core values: a supportive work environment and sustainability. The company leaders find that employees are much happier and productive when they can create their schedules around their personal lives. Compressed workweeks and flexible scheduling options enable employees to participate in triathlons, pick their kids up from school or coach their childrens' teams. Two additional paid days off give even greater flexibility to do volunteer work or participate in outside interests. An extensive array of technology is available to employees so they can work productively from any location and the company offers customization of workstations with a special emphasis on lighting options. Employees report that this feature alone has reduced the frequency of headaches and eye-strain. As most employees either bike or take mass transit to work, the company, in keeping with its emphasis on sustainability, provides alternative transportation benefits. A unique bicycle parking area—complete with maps, patch kits and a tire pump—has been established in the office as well as an office bicycle that anyone can check out to use during the day for both personal and work purposes. “Zip Cars” are also available to transport larger items.

Northwest Lineman College

Education and Higher LearningWinning Site: Meridian, ID, 41 Employees*www.lineman.edu

When leaders at Northwest Lineman College realized their staff was growing faster than they could create space, workplace flexibility provided the solution. Enabling some staff to work from home freed up physical office space while maintaining the staffing level necessary. This flexibility has grown and made it easier for employees to work remotely as needed. Telecommuting is supported by VPN access and computers provided by the college. The college also recruits retired lineman workers, as they are ideal candidates for on-call instructor positions. A special training program helps young employees prepare for management positions. Employees are also provided with a gym membership and clothing allowance, and are invited to provide their input into office decor and set-up. Low turnover and little absenteeism keep things running smoothly at the college. Opinion surveys confirm what leadership expects: employees are satisfied not only with their compensation, but with their jobs and work environment.

Northwest Orthopaedic Specialists, PS

Medical ServicesWinning Site: Spokane, WA, 160 Employees*www.nwos-spokane.com

Dedicated to delivering cutting edge orthopaedic care to help people maintain active lifestyles, Northwest Orthopaedic Specialists offers customized treatment for their patients and their employees. Northwest Orthopaedic Specialists promotes a working culture where as long as business needs are covered, flexibility is an option, whether through shortened work weeks, schedules under 40 hours a week or the technological tools (i.e., laptops, smart phones and remote access to medical records) to allow for telecommuting; the practice has a very successful commute trip reduction program. Northwest Orthopaedic Specialists also implements flexible scheduling options for older employees who are transitioning into retirement as well as for employees with disabilities. They also include younger employees in succession planning and offer training and education for these employees. The combination of flexibility options plus a customized approach to each employee's schedule and personal needs has resulted in high employee retention, a loyal and committed staff, and fewer absences.

Northwest Portland Area Indian Health Board

72 | 77 | 77

Nonprofit Health ServicesWinning Site: Portland, OR, 53 Employees*www.npaihb.org

Servicing 43 Indian reservations in Oregon, Washington and Idaho as well as numerous other Indian organizations throughout the nation, leaders at Northwest Portland Area Indian Health Board realize that their employees are not working typical nine to five jobs. Laptop computers with docking stations, cell phones and phones for teleconferencing help provide accessibility to company information for employees whether they are at home or in the field. Employees are able daily to bring their infants and pets to work and every employee is given 30 minutes of paid time to engage in a wellness activity of his or her choosing. Paid time is also available for American Indian cultural events such as canoe journeys, pow-wows, sun dance and tribal fairs. This enables employees to sustain contact with their tribal heritage or learn firsthand about the cultures and values that the organization supports. There is great emphasis on professional development and a wide variety of workshops and trainings are available that range from vocational training to retirement and long-term investing. The Wellness Committee brings out the best in employees through professional acknowledgements, birthday and anniversary celebrations, healthy eating and exercise programs, and entertainment discounts. The Board's executive director also models an attitude of inclusiveness for all upper management to participate in decision-making processes. Employees are aware of the healthy work environment that has been established and those who leave the company tend to return.

Research, Evaluation and TrainingWinning Site: Portland, OR, 20 Employees*www.npcresearch.com

As an organization that provides research for public policy and program development, NPC Research leadership strives to create an internal environment that enables employees to be productive and creative while attending to their personal lives. Technical support lays the groundwork for this fluid environment but the ability for employees to make their own schedules is what helps build its community. Employees can work from home at almost anytime with the understanding that high-quality work and timely delivery is still expected. Space is provided for onsite child care and employees are able to bring children into their offices during work hours. In addition, NPC Research's philanthropic efforts include volunteering opportunities with the Oregon Food Bank, a monthly delivery to the same institution with an employer match and an employer match for natural disaster relief. Employee successes and birthdays are also celebrated, adding to this family-friendly environment.

Online Information ResourceWinning Site: Dublin, Ohio, 860 Employees*www.oclc.org

OCLC works to connect libraries throughout the world and within the organization, employees are connected with the needs of their families through a variety of workplace flexibility options. All full-time and part-time employees are offered vacation time which can be rolled over to the following year, sick leave which can also be rolled over or used for the care of a sick family member, maternity leave which doesn't depend on the length of employment or FMLA eligibility, and paternity leave where new fathers can use up to 80 hours of accrued sick leave. Alternative work schedules include, but are not limited to, flexible hours, compressed workweeks, reduced work hours, job sharing, "flex place" and telecommuting. These arrangements are available with the help of remote access capabilities, company laptops, BlackBerry devices and videoconferencing. For the health and wellness of employees, management supports usage of the onsite Fitness Center, partial gym membership dues, quarterly blood drives through the American Red Cross, flu shots, reflexology appointments, health education materials and participation in national and local charity walks/runs. OCLC leaders realize that employees are their biggest resource and employees show their appreciation through positive survey feedback, higher productivity and a significant number of job referrals.

Office Furniture GroupRetail Furniture*Winning Site: Irvine, CA, 20 Employees*www.ofgo.com

From the company owner downwards, Office Furniture Group employees have a family first mindset. Employees are supported in caring for their families and are given the ability to work wherever and whenever they want so that they can meet family and work demands. Remote access to company information, laptops and Smartphones build the foundation for flexibility in workspace. Currently, the company has an employee recuperating from foot surgery. She is able to perform all of her duties from home, enabling her to recuperate without the added stress and fear of losing her job, position or good standing at work. The company leadership finds that flexibility inspires employees to be more productive and makes it easier to recruit and retain high-caliber talent.

The Oliver GroupExecutive Coaching and Consulting*Winning Site: Louisville, KY, 18 Employees*www.olivergroup.com

As a company whose mission is to help deliver essential management tools and support to optimize performance of individuals and companies, it's no surprise that The Oliver Group is growing exponentially. For three years running, The Oliver Group has been named a Fast 50 fastest growing private company; since 2011, they have expanded to four additional cities while experiencing turnover decrease of 50%. The Oliver Group leaders know that a flexible workplace is vital to the fast-paced, innovative culture of the company and makes flexibility possible via remote access and Skype. They also offer benefits such as a generous vacation policy, an onsite car detailer, onsite Pilates and frequent catered meals. The company also fosters a collaborative culture via a company garden with plants paid for by the company, and with employee teams managing the care and harvest. They also provide volunteer opportunities for employees, such as Salvation Army fundraising and shopping during the holidays, Walk for the Cure, Bowling for Kids' Sake for Big Brothers/Sisters and efforts for veterans.

Medical ConsultingWinning Site: Phoenix, AZ, 25 Employees*www.orchardmed.com

Leadership at Orchard Medical Consulting in Phoenix, Arizona believes that their nurses should be spending less time at their desks and more time helping patients. In addition to providing industry certification training programs, incentives for continued training and education, and tuition reimbursement for work-related studies, the company goes above and beyond to support the work done by nurses. A strong administrative team and dictation services vendor are responsible for clerical tasks like sending letters and composing case management reports, which enables nurses to spend more time helping patients and feel less stressed and more satisfied with their work. In fact, Orchard Medical Consulting is known in the health care industry for having plenty of administrative staff so that nurses don't get bogged down with clerical work.

Oregon Partnership/Lines for Life

72 | 75 | 76

Nonprofit Social Services OrganizationWinning Site: Portland, OR, 31 Employees*www.linesforlife.org

Oregon Partnership/Lines for Life is a place where positivity is essential. As an organization that works to prevent substance abuse and suicide, the culture is dedicated to this mission and the organization works to provide maximum flexibility in response to this loyalty, encouraging attention to family issues and needs. The roles of younger employees and returning military veterans are especially highlighted as their unique experiences in teen outreach programs and in combat allow a more intimate connection with clients who are teens, returning veterans and military families. In addition to a flexible work schedule, the company works to foster a positive environment with weekly staff meetings and morale building events such as boat cruises and Halloween parties. These activities provide a place where individuals can share significant events in their lives and bond with their teammates in a family-like environment.

Our House **

Nonprofit Medical Services

Winning Site: Portland, OR, 60 Employees

www.ourhouseofportland.org

Voted one of the 100 Best (mid-sized) Nonprofits to work for in Oregon for the last three years, Our House stands out among their peers due to their commitment to people living with AIDS and their employees. Our House tailors employees' schedules to their personal needs whether they are going to school, taking care of children or helping elderly parents. To avoid overtime by regular employees when other employees are not able to work, an on-call nursing staff is utilized. During regular work hours, the on-call staff is able to attend to personal issues. The organization also hosts monthly diversity forums where employees are able to freely express their opinions on a wide variety of topics. The positive effect of these policies is seen in a decrease in absenteeism, decrease in turnover and increase in productivity.

Partnership for Nonprofit Excellence

Nonprofit Coalition

Winning Site: Richmond, VA, 15 Employees

www.pnerichmond.org

Partnership for Nonprofit Excellence strives to enhance the quality of life in Greater Richmond by strengthening nonprofits, promoting civic engagement, sharing information and building community knowledge. The company leaders internalize this energy by fostering leadership opportunities for their employees and creating programs that promote wellness and community. On a quarterly basis, innovative trainers on relevant professional development topics are brought in to speak. Employees are encouraged to lead initiatives such as monthly lunchtime gatherings where staff can teach a craft, play games or share life skills/stories. The company's recently launched Health and Wellness was spearheaded by an AmeriCorps volunteer who also serves as the program's overall coordinator. This initiative includes weekly e-mails with fun and engaging information and tools to help support office wellness. Monthly yoga sessions are available and individual progress in a variety of movement/exercise options is captured on an oversized tracker. Employees are also encouraged to become Volunteer Leaders, connecting staff with the community and providing leadership for organizations and businesses that would like to be involved in more volunteering efforts.

Nonprofit Social Services Organization
Winning Site: Lansing, MI, 325 Employees
www.peckham.org

This nonprofit vocational rehabilitation organization provides job training opportunities for people with significant disabilities and other barriers to employment. The organization uses veteran talent banks, the VA, state rehabilitation agencies and social media to recruit veterans, individuals with disabilities and young people. Military families and veterans are given extra time off and additional flexibility to ease the transitions between military and civilian work life. Emergency funds, subsidized meals and resources that help find low-cost housing and transportation are available to employees facing financial hardship. Technology like Smartphones, laptops, iPads and VPN access are provided to employees as needed. There are no formal flexibility arrangements. Instead, employees are encouraged to think about their personal needs and then the organization does its best to meet those needs. Last year, Peckham bought a large piece of land to start its own sustainable farm. Every two weeks, employees lead a healthy meal preparation demonstration. If employees like the meal, they can opt to take home the prepared ingredients to cook for their families—just $4 for four servings! Turnover at the nonprofit is at an all-time low and employee satisfaction is at an all-time high. Peckham's visibility and reputation in its community continue to rise.

Employee Assistance Programs Provider
Winning Site: Chicago, IL, 55 Employees
www.perspectivesltd.com

Perspectives, a workplace resources company in Chicago, Illinois, works with clients to implement Employee Assistance Programs (EAP), health care and work-life initiatives, among other services. It's no surprise that it delivers these same programs to its own employees. Perspectives posts job openings on veteran-specific job recruiting sites and has an EAP for returning veterans and their families to assist in the transitions between military service and civilian life. Twenty percent of employees work from home thanks to laptops, cell phones, and a virtual IT solution that enables them to access e-mail and documents remotely. An Employee Intranet also keeps employees connected to the company when away from the office. Employee satisfaction surveys indicate that flexibility initiatives have reduced stress. In addition, a new call center staffing strategy has greatly improved employee job satisfaction. This commitment to flexibility also shows in client satisfaction—Perspectives has a customer retention rate of greater than 95% per year.

Technology CompanyWinning Site: Columbus, OH, 45 Employees*www.pillartechnology.com

Pillar Technology is a small company, but that doesn't present a problem for offering flexibility to its employees. Flexible hours, telecommuting and compressed workweeks—when client work allows—are available to employees. Additionally, the company does not require its employees to work overtime. Laptops, cell phones and tablet devices also help some employees better work remotely. Accommodations have been made for a partially deaf employee and a few autistic employees. An individualized approach to all of these situations has resulted in each employee having the resources he or she needs in a work environment that is most comfortable for that individual. Despite the fact that Pillar Technology has not formalized many of its flex policies, leadership makes sure that employees are able to take time for themselves and their families when needs arise. Leadership hears consistently from employees that they appreciate working for a company that allows them to manage their work and life responsibilities. The company has been rewarded with low absenteeism and high productivity.

Certified Public Accountants and Professional AdvisorsWinning Site: Houston, TX, 122 Employees*www.pkftexas.com

At PKF Texas employees are the driving force behind flexibility. The Staff Advisory Committee, composed of employees of all ages and career stages, pursued participation in the Flexible Workplace Initiative's educational events in Houston. The committee now serves as a forum for employees and management to discuss progress being made in flexibility initiatives, among other business issues. The firm leaders have also recently implemented more formalized flexible workplace guidelines to emphasize consideration of the needs of PKF Texas, its employees and its clients to achieve what it calls "Flexibility with Accountability." Campus recruiting, an internship program and scholarships for college students in accounting aid young people. Extensive skills and leadership training, professional development, task force involvement and charity work help involve employees at all career levels in the firm. An Employee Assistance Program is available for all, including military employees and their families. In addition, special requests for extra flexibility are considered for military employees and their loved ones. Technology makes flexible work arrangements possible through firm-provided laptops, monitors, portable scanners, high-speed connectivity allowance, cell phone/Smartphone allowance and Skype. Webinars, videoconferencing, web meeting software and web-based training helps support clients when employees are away from the office. All programs needed to conduct business are available through the firm's VPN or the Internet. Voluntary turnover at the firm is about half the industry's average and "boomerang employees" who left for jobs at other firms return to PKF at high rates due, leaders believe, to the firm's flexibility policies. During 2011, PKF returned to growth of net revenue and anticipates continued growth. The firm has received several awards for workplace excellence, including the Sloan Award.

Portland State University **

Headquartered in Louisville, Kentucky, Prestige Healthcare is a provider of long-term care services with 16 skilled nursing facilities in six states. Like others in its industry, the organization faces significant challenges, including a negative reputation, steep regulation, low wages, very high turnover rates and difficulty attracting new employees. As one way of combating these problems, Prestige offers its staff a variety of scheduling options including 4/2, 10 or 12 hour shifts, split shifts, flextime to cover family responsibilities and telecommuting. "We have a strong customer-service orientation toward our staff members, and that involves constantly seeking their input," says Human Resources Vice President Bill Gray. "When we have important business decisions to make, we make sure they're sitting at the table." The company is also extremely active in all relevant health care associations, trying to influence regulatory decisions that affect business margins and, ultimately, wages. Results include dramatically improved employee and customer satisfaction and greater staff retention.

Principal Financials Group *73 | 67 | 70*Financial Services Provider*Winning Site: Spokane, WA, 155 Employees*www.principal.com

Principal Financials Group credits their longevity—they have been in business for 132 years—and success to the talent and dedication of their employees. And they know that supporting their employees through workplace flexibility and ongoing personal and professional development makes employees happier and more productive in all aspects of their lives. Indeed, employee surveys demonstrated that the company's flexibility offerings have led to higher job satisfaction, productivity and energy levels and lower stress; their wellness program has saved the organization more than $14 million over the course of seven years. Principal Financials Group also is committed to nurturing young talent through mentorship, coaching and training programs, supporting older workers through a program that allows retirees to get paid for working after retirement while still earning a pension from the company, and recruiting and supporting employees with disabilities. They also are deeply committed to recruiting and supporting active and retired military personnel. They participate in and help host local job fairs for members of the military returning from active duty and initiated a Hire Our Heroes program in Des Moines, Iowa, where the company is headquartered. They offer a competitive military leave policy as well as a wide array of programs for returning veterans that provide support services and flexibility—personal leave, PTO, part-time work, alternate schedules, etc.—to ease their transition back to the workplace. Military families have access to support services as well as generous PTO, Bought Time Off, Volunteer Time Off and flexible work arrangements. Principal Financials Group's efforts have resulted in a number of accolades, such as being named to Working Mother's 100 Best Companies for Working Mothers, the Top 50 Companies for Executive Women by the National Association for Female Executives and Computerworld Magazine's 100 Best Places to Work in IT. For their exceptional support of military employees, they also received the Iowa Employer Support of the Guard and Reserve (ESGR) Governor's Award and the 2011 Secretary of Defense Employer Support Freedom Award.

Website Design and DevelopmentWinning Site: Providence, RI, 11 Employees*www.projectevolution.com

Project Evolution, a web design and development firm based in Providence, Rhode Island, is dedicated to establishing a culture of team work and individual excellence. Each team member is an individual contributor who has the sole responsibility of governing what and how long a task will take to accomplish. Subsequently, flex time is the norm and each team works to manage their own processes and projects. Web based communication tools are the bread and butter of daily operation and flexibility, and the firm maintains a “take it when you need it” vacation policy. The firm has found that productivity is increased due to a shared commitment to get better as a team.

ProtectCell

76 | 72 | 75

Retail Wireless InsuranceWinning Site: Novi, MI, 59 Employees*www.protectcell.com

Leaders at this wireless insurance provider encourage their employees to live a “whole life,” which includes home, work, family and community. Trust is key to letting employees manage how and when work gets done. Employees are able to work from home, rearrange their hours and work flexible schedules. Weekly town hall meetings enable employees to bring up any topic or concern without fear of retribution. The executive team at ProtectCell also takes advantage of flexibility to positively model to the rest of the staff. Employees are encouraged to take up to 20 hours yearly to perform service work and another 20 hours for self-improvement activities, like taking a class. A wellness program also provides monthly reimbursement for wellness expenses, such as yoga or new running shoes. Employees can often be heard saying that staff members feel like family. Revenue has increased from $27 million in 2010 to $49 million in 2011—something leadership believes could not have happened without a strong employee base.

Public Policy Associates ****

76 | 66 | 71

Policy Research ConsultingWinning Site: Lansing, MI, 27 Employees*www.publicpolicy.com

Public Policy Associates embraces flexible business practices because its leaders believe they are the best for its employees and organization. The organization offers up to $5,250 per year in tuition reimbursement and each employee reviews his or her career development plan with a supervisor yearly—both of which make Public Policy Associates a great place to work for young professionals. Cloud computing, webinars, teleconferencing and remote access help employees work from home. Managers are also provided with Smartphones and laptops are available to employees who need them.

Training opportunities from informal brown bag lunches to 36 hours of offsite diversity and inclusion training have helped develop employees. Turnover and absenteeism are both low and more than two-thirds of employees have been with the company for more than five years. Productivity is up, which led to the organization having its most successful year yet. Employees were even offered mid-year profit sharing bonuses.

Government AgencyWinning Site: Providence, RI, 172 Employees*www.rhodeislandhousing.org

Rhode Island Housing leaders not only strive to help members of the state afford homes, they also strive to provide well for their employees. They allow older employees flexible scheduling via reduced or part-time hours, provide resources and flexible work schedules for employees with disabilities, support younger employees via tuition reimbursement programs (as well as covering conferences, training and certificate programs to advance their training) and assist low-wage employees with lower-rate family health insurance plans. Their flexibility program includes options such as flextime, telecommuting via remote access, reduced hours and the ability to bring kids to work when their child care falls apart. The benefits are generous as well—all employees have access to financial management training, a generous vacation time and sick time policy, and a good maternity leave policy and parent leave benefit for fathers. As a result, Rhode Island Housing employees have shown increased morale, job satisfaction, productivity and general well-being—all of which have contributed to their receipt of the Providence Chamber of Commerce for our Worksite Wellness Award.

Ride Connection **

Nonprofit Transportation ServicesWinning Site: Portland, OR, 38 Employees*www.rideconnection.org

Ride Connection's purpose is to provide accessible transportation options to those in need; its leaders also work to provide better work options for their employees. When one of its call center employees needed to relocate to care for an ailing family member, the company decided to work with her to help build teleworking capabilities for jobs requiring high contact with clients. Investments in laptops and company networks were pinpointed as the solution and now employees are able to work from wherever they are. This is additionally helpful during severe weather conditions when commuting can be especially risky, for employees who cannot make it back to the office between client interactions and for clients who can enjoy seamless service regardless of the conditions. Supervisors also work with individuals to create alternative work solutions through floater holidays and condensed and flexible workweeks in addition to teleworking possibilities. In return for this investment, employees are more engaged and willing to go above and beyond the call of duty.

Leadership at this full-service financial services firm understands that the investment made in employees enhances all aspects of workplace performance. They believe that the family-friendly atmosphere in the office is a direct result of strong flexibility practices. Virtual office technology and equipment for professional and support staff allow work to be done from home or other locations. In addition, flexible work schedules and compensation arrangements enable employees to take care of their families while they take care of work responsibilities. The lower levels of stress and conflict that result from these measures create a positive atmosphere and cohesive group that genuinely care about one another. Coworkers go out of their way to assist others with their flexible schedules.

Employees who retire are able to come back to work part time if they want. Job openings at the college are advertised to organizations that support veterans re-entering the workforce and a veteran's center on campus is available for students and employees. An Employee Assistance Program provides ten free sessions to employees and their families who need financial or emotional support. Remote access, and audio and video conferencing enable employees to work from home. Health and wellness are incorporated into flexible work initiatives and trainings and employees have access to a fitness center they can use during the day. It's not surprising Rio Salado College was voted the Valley's Healthiest Employer in 2010 and 2011!

River Network *60 | 74 | 71*Environmental Organization*Winning Site: Portland, OR, 11 Employees*www.rivernetnetwork.org

River Network's leaders' commitment to the communities that protect Oregon's rivers is rivaled only by their commitment to the families of their employees. Web conferencing technology is heavily used for biweekly staff meetings and client meetings, while remote access enables employees to access their office computers from home machines. While this flexibility also calls for more communication among employees, many employees find that this added layer of responsibility is preferable so that they can spend more time with their kids or their personal projects. River Network not only has a low turnover rate due to their flexibility practices, their leaders also hear from candidates for recent openings that the organization's flexibility is what makes them more attractive over other employers.

Riverbed Technology82 | 77 | 80*Technology Consulting*Winning Site: San Francisco, CA, 500 Employees*www.riverbed.com

Providing computer support throughout the Sacramento area, Riverbed Technology leaders know the power of technology. For its employees, they provide the flexibility to work remotely through company laptops, VPN access, softphone software and headsets, e-mail, Internet access, subsidized phones and phone service, and, in some cases, subsidized home Internet connections. Riverbed Human Resources now provides online employee self-service transactions so that employees can make time off, sick day or leave time requests 24/7 by logging into the system. They also provide online benefits enrollment so that employees are able to make personal changes to their benefits; add or delete dependents on medical, dental, vision and life plans; review benefit plan details to learn more about supplemental services paid for by Riverbed; or request assistance at any time. Riverbed Payroll now offers online expense reimbursements so that employees can submit requests for reimbursement at any time and have the approved expense reports deposited directly into employees' checking or savings accounts. The company's online site also provides employees with specific compensation, benefit, wellness and retirement details for each individual employee so they can see the value of their employment with Riverbed Technology.

The Rochester Area Chamber of Commerce uses flexibility to create a positive and energized work environment. All employees are able to submit personalized flexible work arrangements for approval by supervisors. Twenty percent are currently using some kind of flexible work arrangement, like altering their start and end work times or telecommuting a few days each week. The Chamber conducts a leadership development program for the community that employees can attend at no charge. Laptops are provided to employees who need them for their jobs, and all employees can connect to the Chamber's network via VPN access from their personal computers. Hourly employees are also able to flex their hours just like salaried employees. Many events happen after regular business hours and require extensive prep time. Employees are trusted to take the time needed to complete the project, and then reduce their hours on other days. During a time when many Chambers have suffered membership losses, the Rochester Chamber has grown, expanding its programs and initiatives!

Rose City Mortgage has experienced no employee turnover for the last four years and foresees 2012 as their highest grossing year in five years. How are they able to achieve this in today's economy? Their leaders believe that flexibility is the key to their success. Their employees are able to work wherever and whenever they want, enabling them to be present for their families and pursue the own goals. A back-up system for employees with less flexible jobs has been established so that everyone is able to take care of his or her lives. Younger employees are provided training, mentoring and work schedules customized around their school schedules. The company also focuses on personal growth and goals and participates in a donation program toward a nonprofit organization. This contributes to having the employees feel like they are contributing to something bigger than themselves, helping to change the world.

Ryan LLC

Tax Services

This multi-site professional tax services firm has demonstrated a deep commitment to workplace flexibility for its employees that goes back to 2008. CEO Brint Ryan realized that things needed to change because of a loss of what he calls the “shining stars.” He realized the firm was creating a “sweatshop reputation” and they needed to do “something truly radical.” The result is called myRyan. It enables employees to work wherever they want and whenever they want, as long as their work responsibilities are met. At Ryan, there is no defined organization-wide schedule, no minimum hours and no requirement that work be done in the office. Instead of tracking hours spent at work, employees are held responsible for their performance and results. By tracking client service scores, revenues, leadership, core competencies and other firm-wide initiatives through an online dashboard called myRyan Measures, employees can easily track their performance. Executive Vice President and Chief of Staff Delta Emerson says, “We focus completely on our people getting done what they’re supposed to be getting done. myRyan is built on results.” This focus on results, quantified by a “score,” means that Ryan employees are responsible for creating and managing their performance and their schedules. Maintaining a high score has replaced the need to work a certain number of billable hours, which is the traditional metric by which professional service firms are measured. All employees are given laptops, access to phone conference bridges, WebEx meeting tools, voice mail, video conferencing and other technology tools that allow them to work with total flexibility. Ryan has also taken a number of steps to improve work for young employees, employees nearing retirement and for military members and their families. Ryan recently implemented an 18-month development track for senior consultants, usually in their 20’s, who wish to transition to more senior management roles within the firm. At the other end of the career spectrum, employees nearing retirement have the option of slowly reducing the number of hours they work per week. And for employees serving in the military, Ryan pays the salary differential between employee and military pay and keeps employees’ benefits in tact while on duty. When military members return from duty, they are allowed whatever flexibility they need as they transition back into civilian life. Flexibility is also sought for support staff. Executive assistants work with their executives to identify days that they can work from home, for example, when an executive is traveling or when an assistant is working on a project that could be completed remotely. These flexibility options have resulted in a more positive and comfortable work environment—turnover is low, employee satisfaction has increased, the cost of benefits is lower than average and revenues and client satisfaction scores are high. Ryan is currently involved in a research program with Boston College and Life Meets Work to further improve its flexibility program by equipping managers with better workplace flexibility training. Ryan has also demonstrated its commitment to philanthropy—since 2005, employees have donated over $4 million dollars to various charities and the company recently formed the Ryan Foundation, a 501(c)(3) focused on helping organizations that address health, poverty and distress, and educational needs.

Sability, a company specializing in workforce management, has leaders who believe the road to productivity and success is through workers with maximum workplace flexibility. Employees are able to work from home as much as they desire and set their own hours as long as client needs are met. Technology enables workers to address client needs electronically and most implementations are done without meeting the client in person. VoIP WebEx, an internal social media product and an instant messenger service also help employees work remotely. In addition, Sability recruits mature employees, job seekers with disabilities and veterans through networking and targeted job advertisements. Clients and employees report being happy and the business has doubled in size in the last nine months and expects to do so again over the next nine months.

Flexibility is an essential ingredient in Sansiveri, Kimball, & Company's business philosophy. The firm makes significant investments in technology—such as laptops, cell phones, PDAs, iPads, and file transfer systems such as LeapFile and the paperless DocIt system—that allow employees to work remotely when necessary. They also recently moved from a traditional vacation and sick time program to a system of Paid Time Off that affords a more flexible arrangement for time away from work. Many employees are working parents and parents with elder care responsibilities who are able to continue their careers because their flexible work schedules allow them to meet the demands of their job while also allowing them to be there for their families. Sansiveri, Kimball, & Company also helps employees continue to grow through their performance and career development process (PACE), which serves to keep communication between employees and supervisors open. PACE facilitates discussions on personal and career goals and provides a structure to set goals that meet both the needs of the employees and the firm. Sansiveri, Kimball, & Company leaders believe that understanding and meeting their employees' needs has increased employee retention and allows them to attract qualified caring employees.

Employees of Scientific Research Corporation know that the company not only provides technology solutions, it provides people solutions as well. Events such as a death in the family, major illness in the family or any similar problems are completely supported by management. To work with employee needs, the company offers different types of employment status: Full time (40 hour/week), Modified Full time (30 hour/week) and Part time (less than 30 hour/week). Remote access, Internet, Intranet, electronic data collection software and other software applications allow employees to manage their work responsibilities with their family lives. The company recognizes superior work and offers "Spot Awards" as well as bonuses. A company newsletter publicly recognizes hard work and successes of its employees and other rewards are available including peer recognition, financial rewards and promotions.

Hospital and Healthcare ServicesWinning Site: Scottsdale, AZ, 6,700 Employees*www.shc.org

Personalized careers help all employees at Scottsdale Healthcare thrive. The healthcare organization has increased its efforts to retain Baby Boomer employees through flexible scheduling, special recognition for service milestones and generous benefits like matching 403(b) contributions. The organization also ensures that all interview venues are accessible to interviewees with physical disabilities. Several employees with sight impairment are able to telecommute from home and have been outfitted with special computer workstations. Employees, who may not be disabled, but have physical limitation, can work with the organization to shift their responsibilities to something more manageable. Veterans are actively recruited into the organization through training programs offered by Scottsdale Healthcare and through community organizations and career counselors. An Employee Assistance Program also helps military members and their families. Benefits are also available to part-time employees and include paid time off, flexible work schedules, compressed workweeks, job sharing, many telecommuting options, health insurance, tuition assistance, onsite child care, subsidized back-up child and elder care, subsidized in-home care for sick children, a nursing mothers' program and lactation station, help for commuters with free bus passes, a guaranteed ride home program, van pools, car pools, secure bike locks, and showers. Scottsdale Healthcare University also offers onsite degree and certificate programs and career/internship placement. It's not surprising that in the annual Employee Opinion Survey, more than 92% of employees said that they are proud of their work, are satisfied with their jobs, and that they would like to still be working for Scottsdale Healthcare three years from now!

Law FirmWinning Site: Dayton, OH, 53 Employees*www.ssdlaw.com

This law firm's leaders understand attorneys and their support staff work hard, but they also understand that employees need time for themselves and their families and that flexibility is the best way to deliver that. Summer law clerks are often offered full-time employment after graduation from law school. A mentoring system for young attorneys and tuition reimbursement go a long way in helping new hires. Flexplace is aided by VPN access, laptops, workplace e-mail accessible from home, VOIP telephone systems, BlackBerry devices, iPhones and wireless Internet. Flexibility is often used by attorneys and their support staff after a trial is over. They may have spent many late nights working, but are able to take extra time off after the workload decreases. The firm has almost no absenteeism and low turnover. Sebaly Shillito + Dyer has been rated a Best Place to Work three years in a row and has won the Sloan Award twice before. Despite a tough economy, the firm has opened a new office that has, so far, been a very successful venture.

Service Express, Inc. is a results-driven organization, focusing on the satisfaction of its customers and its employees. The company relies more on employee engagement than the time clock to measure productivity and credits its flexibility practices for empowering employees. Vision Talks with managers help employees define personal, professional and career goals and create a place for them to access these goals on the Intranet so they can easily review, track and update these goals at any time. The company also relies on employee feedback and the innovative thinking that comes from their unique experiences to help add automation, technology and proven processes that are meaningful. Laptops, Droids and Tablets allow employees to access on-line tools that enhance their work from home or in the field. These tools include a company Intranet and employee dashboards allowing real-time access to tasks and employee information; access to inventory, the Internet and technical manuals while employees are at customer sites or on the road; online technical libraries to avoid large printed materials for reference that quickly become dated; and flexibility with work hours and locations. Not only do these measures have a direct impact on the companies' customers, they also have an impact on employees' families. The best comments the companies receive are from employees' spouses who say that their husband/wife is like a new person since working at Service Express, Inc...in a good way!

As a physical rehabilitation center, Sheltering Arms' leaders understand that one solution does not fit all needs. Internally, solutions are created through a flexible work environment, investment in the education and health of their employees, technology, and programs crafted from employee feedback. Flexible work arrangements include compressed workweeks, part-time schedules with flexible days and hours, and on-call work and weekend shifts with higher pay. These shifts are especially helpful for young professionals who are pursuing educational opportunities or managing family care. Team members can change their work status at any time without altering their tenure with the organization. Employees are encouraged to pursue higher education through funding for staff development, continued education, tuition reimbursement and professional memberships. In return, the Center leadership makes the sole request that employees pass what they've learned on to teammates through organized trainings. The Center also provides career path discussions, cross-training opportunities, a leadership development program and onsite clinical workshops to cut down on travel for their employees. Mentorship programs are available for younger employees and internship possibilities are researched for employees with disabilities. Recently, free membership to surrounding gyms, discounted prices on personal training services and free teammate training were offered as part of the center's Wellness program. The Center also looks after the well-being of its employees through its Gold Leaf employee recognition program, an Employee Assistance Program and Fund for Folks—a program designed to support team members experiencing financial hardship through direct financial assistance, referrals to community programs or a donation of paid time off. Sheltering Arms has also made investments in technology to provide remote access to patient records, timekeeping systems, online learning and performance modules, performance management systems, and an electronic benefits management system that allows employees access to their policies so they can make more informed choices. Sheltering Arms enjoys the unique distinctions of having 100% of young mothers return to work after they have their children and, for a fourth year in a row, health care premiums have not been increased.

Sikich, a company that provides business consulting services, has leaders who understand that without dedicated, motivated and appreciated employees, they wouldn't have clients. That's why Sikich is dedicated to ensuring employees are given the flexibility and support they need. Employees are able to do their client work thanks to remote access, Smartphones and electronic files. Employees are able to maintain a high level of client satisfaction even when taking advantage of flexibility programs like part-time work, seasonal work or variable schedules—peak hours during the busy season and fewer hours during the off season. Sikich has retained its mature employees by offering part-time work and project-based work that enable these employees to perform the amount of work that fits with their needs. A job shadow program is available to young people interested in Sikich's work and an internship program serves as an apprenticeship program for college students, working them toward full employment upon graduation. Low-wage employees are offered overtime to bolster their paychecks. "Sikich University" houses the company's many training and career development programs. Programs on financial wellness, health and well-being, the opportunity for each employee to have his or her own garden plot onsite, and a 1.1-mile track surrounding the office keep spirits high and overall health as a top priority. Sikich has received several awards for workplace excellence, has low turnover rates compared with other companies in the industry and has continued to grow despite the slowed economy.

Leadership at this engineering firm has fostered a culture that supports a team focused on excellence. An affirmative action plan helps recruit older employees and the firm recruits veterans directly from military bases and via veteran organizations' job boards. Tuition assistance is available for employees wishing to continue their professional development and Skylla sends its employees to certification trainings. Returning veterans have support from the firm to reenter work at their own pace. The firm also attempts to relocate military spouses as they follow their active duty spouse from location to location. The firm leaders have offered relocation expenses to low-income families attempting to move and accept special flexibility requests for low-wage employees. Conference calls, video chats, e-mail and text messaging help employees keep in touch with one another and with clients wherever they are. These technologies also support flexibility policies like flexible work hours, flex place, flexible leave time and job sharing. These policies are instrumental in attracting, recruiting and retaining high-quality employees. The firm has enjoyed consecutive growth year over year, as well as below-average attrition rates for the industry. The company has, thus, gained a reputation as a great place to work!

Southeast Service Cooperative is a public, nonprofit cooperative of over 80 public and private school districts, cities, counties, and other member organizations dedicated to maximizing resources and increasing value through collaboration. Leadership at the organization knows life outside of work can have a huge impact on life on the job and that flexibility can help keep employees focused and working efficiently. Employees can work from home, flex their hours, work compressed workweeks or request a unique arrangement from management. Young employees are able to flex their schedules around classes and exams and are offered tuition reimbursement. Mature employees are also able to flex their hours and phase into retirement by slowly reducing their hours. Nearly all employees are given laptops with VPN access and employees who aren't given laptops can request to use one when the need arises. Many employees are also given Smartphones to help them stay connected. Webcams and teleconferencing also help people work away from the office. With these tools, employees are able to get just as much work done as if they were working in the office. The organization's wellness initiative is very popular, with 80%-100% of employees participating in events like yoga, T'ai Chi, health forums and classes, and outdoor activities. The organization has a low rate of turnover, greatly reduced absenteeism, and high productivity and efficiency.

Since Sport & Spine Physical Therapy is a medical facility, it needs to have continuity of care for its patients and accessibility for appointments. Their leaders allow employees to bring children to work in certain situations when alternative child care isn't available. Work hours can also be flexed when an absence is planned. Employees are encouraged to volunteer in the community, which serves as a great team-building exercise. When conflicts arise, team members are encouraged to work out a solution themselves and then present it to a supervisor for approval. A strong sense of camaraderie keeps the work environment upbeat. Leadership believes employees feel less stressed and are using fewer sick days. The provider's client base has increased due to word of mouth and some patients have even asked if jobs are available because they want to work for Sport & Spine Physical Therapy!

Staffing Solutions EnterprisesRecruitment Solutions*Winning Site: Mayfield Heights, OH, 20 Employees*www.staffsol.com

Staffing Solutions Enterprises introduced its first flexible work arrangement back in 1995 when an employee had her second child. After approaching the company with her desire to keep working, she was able to work 30 hours a week in three ten-hour days. She became one of the company's most productive Business Development Representatives and rose to the role of President in 2009. This example of workplace flexibility became the template for many other employees and Staffing Solutions Enterprises was able to witness firsthand the increase in employee engagement and loyalty that ensued. To expand its flexibility practices, the company invested in technology and web hosting to increase teleworking opportunities. Employees can now access their work through Smartphones lending greater flexibility to take care of family needs. Call center employees also enjoy flexibility through cross-trained staff and cell phones where calls can go directly to them versus the main office. Staffing Solutions Enterprises leaders also realize the need for fun and camaraderie in the office and rely on their "Fun Team" to plan quarterly events including picnics, potlucks, ice cream socials, baby and wedding showers, a corn-hole tournament, a fondue luncheon, and pancake breakfasts.

Stoel RivesLaw Firm*864 Employees in the U.S.*www.stoel.com

Though law firms can be high stress places where working long hours is necessary, Stoel Rives uses flexibility to make work "work" for its employees. Attorneys are able to check out BlackBerry devices and laptops to enable them to work from the road or home. Remote access software allows employees to access their desktops even when they're not at the office. The firm is also in the process of moving to electronic file storage that will make all files available electronically. 24/7 IT support ensures that employees are never kept from doing their jobs when technical issues arise. Employees nearing retirement are able to "phase down," working part time as they ease into retirement. A Diversity and Inclusion Committee ensures that the firm is taking steps to recruit and hire lawyers of many different backgrounds. This initiative has resulted in the firm consistently exceeding the national average for comparable law firms in terms of percentage of attorneys with disabilities. Several training and mentoring programs for entry-level attorneys and a summer associate program for law students help to immerse new lawyers and law students in firm culture. Military members and their families are provided extra time off and flexibility on a case-by-case basis. To make sure daily flexibility and firm work run smoothly, an Office Administrator is responsible for managing the practice assistants and acting as a liaison between staff and attorneys to get everyone the support they need daily. Support staff members are also able to work non-traditional schedules. A Parenting Circle, reduced schedules, sabbaticals and paid time off for family leave all help the attorneys better manage their work and family responsibilities. Employee recognition, health and wellness initiatives, volunteerism and charity events, and fun office events like a Halloween costume contest keep spirits high. These efforts are seen in the loyalty of staff—100% of the firm's legal practice assistants have been with the firm for more than eight years. The firm, overall, has experienced a decrease in turnover, has low absenteeism and has been recognized with several different awards.

Leaders at public accounting firm Strothman & Company have found that the key to helping employees achieve a work-life fit is to strategize hiring and staffing throughout the year. The firm hires effectively and works diligently to achieve even work-flow throughout the year, which results in a staff that works fewer hours than other comparable companies during tax season and negates the need to hire extra staff during the busy season and then let them go once the season is over. They use laptops and remote access to help employees achieve flexibility and allow administrative and technology members to rotate the nights and weekends they work to provide time off while still making sure the office is well staffed. Strothman & Company also offers incentives such as regularly covered meals during the busy tax season, bonuses and extra time off to those who have to work extended hours, and a generous amount of paid time off as well as extra time off for meeting goals throughout the year. Morale is kept high via regular employee recognition awards, office celebrations and family-friendly events.

Sturgill, Turner, Barker & Moloney's priority is family and the firm invests in technology so that all employees can spend time and take care of their families. Remote access to the firm's computer network enables employees to work from home or on the road. Smartphones keep employees in touch by accessing company e-mails. The firm is working on a paperless environment as more people work from home and iPads are the next device to be provided to employees. Recently, the firm expanded its remote work arrangement to include IT staff. It was previously felt that these employees had to be hands on in the office every day, but through the purchase of software that gives them the ability to take control of an employee's desktop remotely, IT staff are able to resolve issues without having to physically be in the office. Compressed workweeks are also another popular way for employees to have more family time and take care of personal errands without having to take off work. The firm also has job sharing, part-time employment, work hour reduction options to help employees ease into retirement, and a law clerk program that helps expose employees finishing law school to the world of being an attorney. These benefit practices have made the firm an eight-time winner of the Best Place to Work in Kentucky and a three-time winner of the Sloan Award.

Pharmaceutical CompanyWinning Site: Chicago, IL, 1,431 Employees*www.takeda.us

Leadership at this pharmaceutical company takes the health of the people who use their products and the overall health and well-being of its employees seriously. Flexible work options like compressed workweeks and telecommuting are available. In addition, several onsite amenities like a free shuttle from the commuter train to the office, a no-fee ATM, dry cleaning drop off and pick up, complimentary beverages and even a convenience store are available to employees. Technologies like laptop computers with remote connectivity for most employees help them work remotely. An electronic travel-tracking tool lets the company and employees' loved ones see where traveling employees are. This tool proved invaluable in tracking down Takeda employees during the 2010 earthquake and tsunami in Japan. The tool allowed the company to quickly account for all travelers and provide them instruction for getting home. The company also posts jobs on Websites geared toward disabled job seekers and veterans transitioning into civilian work. To help parents, Takeda provides onsite child care up through six years of age, as well as a certified kindergarten program. Employees qualify for discounted child care rates as well as up to 20 days of back-up child care each per year. According to employee engagement surveys, employees are proud to work for Takeda and are willing to go above and beyond what is required to help the company succeed.

Higher Education and LibraryWinning Site: Houston, TX, 59 Employees*www.library.tmc.edu

As a major online and print medical library, Texas Medical Center Library (TMC) is used to providing services for the medical community in Texas. As an employer, TMC works to ensure that the service it provides for its employees allows them to have the flexibility they need to take care of their lives inside and outside of work. Along with flexible schedules, a generous paid time off program and technology that allows employees to work from home, TMC offers a Sick Leave Pool that provides additional sick leave for regular, full-time employees with a serious illness or who have an immediate family member with a serious medical condition (up to 480 hours per employee). Active employees or employees separating from the company can also contribute their paid time off toward this resource. TMC also offers a memorial fund that provides financial assistance of up to $1,000 for both full- and part-time employees who experience a family crisis that results in financial hardship. On the preventative side, TMC recently created a wellness committee that helped form an onsite "fitness center" comprised mainly of employee-donated equipment, including a Nintendo Wii, an exercise bike, an elliptical machine, and a television and DVD player that employees can use for their own exercise videos. Some employees volunteer to teach aerobics and Pilates classes and the company allows 30 minutes of paid time per day to exercise. TMC also holds fitness challenges with prizes to encourage employees to take care of their health.

Leaders at this construction company in Chicago, Illinois have created a culture that supports employees in their work, their career development and in their personal lives. Employees who are ready can be promoted regardless of whether or not a job opening is available and training, mentoring and feedback help create customized careers for each employee of Turner Construction. In addition, a Development Appraisal Program provides structured feedback for employees. For employees in the armed forces and national guard, compensation and benefit continuation during service helps military families. Turner also makes up the pay differential between employees' military base pay and Turner pay. An Employee Assistance Program provides help for military members and their families. Despite the fact that client needs can be demanding in the construction business, Turner leaders ensure that employees are able to work flexibly through telecommuting, flex time, compressed workweeks, job sharing and compensation days as appropriate. Wellness programs and charitable work help keep morale high. Project management software designed specifically for Turner enables employees to access data and documents anywhere at any time. The Turner Knowledge Network also enables employees to access directories, webcasts, manuals, forms, Turner news and benefits information remotely. Turner employees are proud of their work and this shows through high retention rates, low turnover, a high volume of work and high morale.

United Airlines – North Houston Reservations

Transportation

www.united.com

United Airlines contact center for North Houston reservations builds its work processes around its employees being able to work morning, noon and night with the flexibility to change their start and stop times, trade shifts, and work in 27 different states. Just like customers expect flexibility from the airline, United leaders provide flexibility to their employees. Employees with disabilities are helped by programs that assist with transportation needs, tailoring work stations and computer equipment, and adjusting disabled employees' schedules to accommodate their needs for extra time for breaks or more time off during the day. One unique development tool benefits younger employees. When a management position is going to be left vacant, a junior employee is trained to assume the role until it is filled permanently. United's We Care fund is an internal charity that assists employees in great times of need and is funded through fundraisers conducted by the company. Technology allows front-line employees to work from home in a total of 27 different states. VPN access allows managers to access their desktops from any computer, enabling them to work remotely. BlackBerry devices also help keep them in touch when away. United's Staff Management tool allows employees to adjust their start and stop work times; post, pick up and trade shifts; request paid and unpaid vacation time; request training; and request briefings with their managers among other tasks. United leadership believes that they way employees and management treat each other will be reflected in the quality of care customers receive. Attrition rates are just 5%—well below the contact center industry average of 25-50%. In addition, since implementing these flexibility options, it has been easier to increase staffing due to unforeseen need; their leaders believe it's because employees are willing to also flex to the need of the business.

Protecting the country is a 24/7 job and training sailors to meet that need can be just as demanding. The organization leadership understands the commitment and dedication necessary for the job and works to provide flexibility and incentive for its personnel to rise to the occasion. Technological advancements enable personnel to provide real-time training, automate processes to decrease the paper trail, synchronize trainings on different coasts, allow for professional development training for top-notch officers/enlisted men and help personnel project training evolutions so that flexibility can be provided in scheduling. With a flexible leave and time off policy, all employees are able to commit time to both their families and their workloads. The organization recognizes hard work and dedication through awards such as Senior Sailor of the Quarter and Year and Junior Sailor of the Quarter and Year. Personnel also receive impact awards for accomplishments that go above and beyond their job description. Educational opportunities are encouraged as well as the benefits of personal health. The organization’s Health and Wellness program authorizes time off during working hours to participate in personal training and fitness. These flexibility practices have led to 100% retention of contractors and government employees.

Leaders of this consulting and executive search firm believe that providing an environment that is open to change and individual interests creates a place where people feel free to be themselves, striving to be the best they can be. In the past year, Vaco provided networking and corporate team building events such as picnics, tickets to local baseball games, young professional networking events and incentive trips for top producers to increase the comfort level of employees with the community around them. Employees are given a day of paid time off to volunteer in the charity of their choice and catered Lunch-n-Learn programs have been implemented to concentrate on personal wellness and stress reduction. The company adopted a new customer relationship management system to streamline daily tasks, opened a new satellite office and invested in additional technological resources to retain talent regardless of location. To promote a team environment and ensure that hourly employees are able to enjoy flexibility benefits, Vaco provides reimbursement for personal phones that are also used for business. More training opportunities are also available for marketing and administrative teams and reimbursement is offered for educational courses that are relevant to daily responsibilities. Finally, to make it possible for hourly employees to participate in team events, the company outsources administrative employees to keep the office running in their absence.

Valassis Inc.Marketing Services*4,900 Employees in the U.S.*www.valassis.com

This direct mail and marketing services company has leaders who understand the importance of managing work and life as they relate not only to the employees, but to business. The company recruits new disabled, mature and veteran employees from targeted job fairs and its relationships with community organizations. In addition, Valassis conducts a summer intern program and has mentoring programs. Families of service members are provided extra time before a deployment to spend time together and the company assembles care packages for troops. In light of today's economy, technology plays a key role in making flexibility practical. Tools such as video conferencing, phone conferencing and remote access help employees work remotely and help the company save on travel and commuting expenses. Employees in management positions attend monthly videoconference or web-based presentations called Leadership Toolkits. Most employees are able to work remotely and salaried exempt and non-exempt workers are offered a 37.5-hour workweek, which gives them 2.5 hours each week to attend to personal needs. Employees on all levels are given an opportunity to participate in Diversity Committees and the company’s Executive Council, discussing matters that are of interest and importance to all employees across the organization. Employee incentives and awards include a performance bonus for top performers, The Biggest Loser Weight Loss Challenge and a trip to an exotic location. Valassis leadership also goes the extra mile for its employees through active giving programs such as car seats for associates having their first child, care baskets for students of associates going to college and bereavement boxes for associates who have experienced the loss of a loved one. Various committees, charity events and a partnership with The Center for Missing and Exploited Children let employees give back to the community as well. Valassis’ missing child program “Have You Seen Me?” is heavily invested in by employees and is responsible for the recovery of 150 children. Valassis’ commitment to becoming a great place to work shows in decreased turnover and absenteeism in addition to the many awards it has received for workplace excellence.

Verde Valley Sanctuary 	78	82	82
-----------------------------------	-----------	-----------	-----------

Human Service Nonprofit
Winning Site: Sedona, AZ, 24 Employees
www.verdevalleysanctuary.org

As a sanctuary that provides shelter and services to victims of domestic violence, Verde Valley Sanctuary needs a team that is compassionate and strong to provide the best services. Dealing with great pain and difficult situations can take a toll on staff; they need to be able to have time to themselves and with their families while knowing they are supported by their colleagues. Being able to take time off enables employees to come back refreshed and ready to help. The workplace mantra of “family first” encourages employees to take time with their spouses and children away from work to keep them from becoming drained. Even employees whose jobs do not lend themselves to typical flexibility options are able to change shifts and apply for other positions within the organization. The sanctuary leadership also understands the value of having a diverse workforce and sees flexibility as a way to recruit and retain both younger and older employees. Positions are available part-time and hourly, and many are filled by mature retired employees who prefer a reduced schedule. Flexible work options at Verde Valley Sanctuary attract younger employees who are finishing degree programs or who have children at home. The Sanctuary supports development of job skills so that low-wage employees are able to move to higher-paid positions or work more hours within the organization. On occasion, cash advances and emergency aid have been provided to workers in need. Technology allows some employees to work offsite while maintaining the same level, or sometimes a better level, of communication with staff and supervisors onsite. Overall, both salaried and hourly workers are satisfied with the flexibility options open to them. The organization has low turnover and minimal absenteeism. The high quality of services the organization provides shows in its public and private funding and the satisfaction of the women it serves.

Law FirmWinning Site: Grand Rapids, MI, 379 Employees*www.wnj.com

Warner Norcross & Judd leadership sees flexibility as an essential element in attracting and retaining the brightest minds. Job sharing, flexible start and end times, and benefits for part-time employees who work more than 18.75 hours per week help people work in a way that fits with their needs. Mature employees are able to reduce their hours and can work with HR to ensure there is no negative impact on their benefits. Administrative employees are also able to use flexibility by opting to work in teams that provide coverage for one another. A three-year corporate development plan for new attorneys helps their transition from law school into firm life. The firm also pays the study and certification exam fees for legal secretaries. Job-share and internship programs are available to middle school students up through college students. Laptops are given to most employees and all employees are able to borrow firm laptops to work on projects remotely. Remote access helps everyone stay connected no matter where they're working. Financial planning assistance, an Employee Assistance Program and a wellness program keep employees in good shape physically, emotionally and financially. Service projects like Holiday Aid, kids food baskets and blood drives help the firm's communities. Since implementing flexibility options, voluntary turnover at the firm has dropped to under 5%. Medical benefit costs have also decreased.

Nonprofit Health OrganizationWinning Site: Marietta, GA, 11,000 Employees*www.wellstar.org

As a health care provider, it takes some innovative thinking to make flexibility available to all employees. WellStar leadership has accomplished this with its FlexWorks program. Nurses, who in the past have lacked access to much schedule control or traditional flexibility, are now able to schedule themselves via an online tool. This enables teams to work together to ensure proper coverage and has taken scheduling pressure off of managers—a win-win situation. WellStar has also created a Website dedicated to flexibility that includes trainings, toolkits and resources for team members and leaders. WellStar has also partnered with AARP to better recruit and retain mature workers and with the Tommy Nobis Center for People with Disabilities to recruit and retain employees with disabilities. A Career Development Center offers career counseling to WellStar employees at all stages of their careers. The health system recently added 120 hours of paid parental leave for full-time employees, 60 hours for part-time staff and has doubled adoption assistance from $10,000 to $20,000. A wellness program, personal health coaches, financial planning and tax preparation assistance all benefit employees personal and financial health. WellStar has had great benefits since formalizing its flexibility program—turnover is below industry average at 10.07%; vacancy rates are below average; patient satisfaction has increased; and the health system is now ranked in the top quartile of its industry for employee engagement.

Insurance CompanyWinning Site: Twin Cities, MN, 304 Employees*www.wnins.com

The tagline for Western National Mutual Insurance Company is “the Relationship Company.” The company leadership stands by this claim by providing a rewarding work experience as well as financial security. Older employees are able to reduce hours, participate in temporary assignments or transition to independent contractor status while younger employees are hired as interns and given fast-track education goals. Facility accommodations are made for employees with disabilities in addition to reduced hours and other customized return to work measures. Returning veterans and military families are also offered pay and benefits beyond what is required by the Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act (USERRA). A Shared Leave Program is available to all employees and allows for paid time off donations from employees with emergency needs. Wellness programs have had a positive impact on medical costs while the company’s generous benefit programs play a key role in keeping turnover to a minimum. The company also promotes serving the community, offering paid volunteer time and matching charitable contributions given by employees.

By implementing flexible work schedules, comprehensive benefit plans, personal time to attend to family needs, sabbatical programs, a parental care program and ongoing education programs for all employees, Xylo Technologies has created a work atmosphere that its leaders believe is inspirational and employee-friendly. Even employees whose jobs don't easily lend themselves to flexibility are able to work reduced hours and work remotely with laptops and Smartphones. An online portal gives employees access to the documents and programs they need to get their work done from any place at any time. Xylo Technologies was led to increase its flexibility due to employees requesting a better way to work and meet family responsibilities and the ability to pursue higher education. The company recruits mature employees and offers part-time flexible hours to meet their needs. This commitment to flexibility has resulted in lower-than-average turnover and a 50% increase in placement ratio.

Nonprofit Community Counseling Services
Winning Site: Massapequa, NY, 40 Employees
www.yesccc.org

Leaders at YES Community Counseling Center respect and acknowledge the personal issues that emerge for its employees. This not only improves their personal well-being, but enhances their performance. The Center serves more than 10,000 people each year so it's important that the staff be cohesive and responsive to the needs of clients. The Center has much lower turnover than average for the human services industry and they believe this is due to its flexible work options. Flexible schedules, liberal time off and sensitivity to emergency issues all allow employees to meet their family and work needs. Leadership at the Center believes flexibility and open communication have had positive effects on staff morale and the work environment.
